Foreigners manipulating flour market in Nigeria

By Sunday Michael Ogwu, Abdullateef Aliyu (Lagos), Misbahu Bashir (Maiduguri), Hussein Yahaya, Simon Echowofun Sunday, Victoria Onehi, Vincent A. Yusuf, & Francis Arinze Iloani (Abuja)

Flour mills controlled by foreigners in Nigeria are exploiting local farmers and bakers through the arbitrary increase of prices of the commodity, which is also affecting the purchasing power of consumers, investigation by Daily Trust revealed.

It was gathered from sources in the flour milling industry that top foreign companies in the industry are taking advantage of their financial muscle to exploit wheat farmers and suppliers.

Farmers and bakers who rely on flour and associated products for their production described the “coordinated and arbitrary increase of prices as exploitative.”

Top millers calling the shorts

Documents seen by the Daily Trust showed that leading flour producing companies are controlled by foreigners even as they collectively operate like a cartel, manipulating the market forces and increasing prices at will.

There is no room for local bakers and pastry producers to have a say before the prices of flour and associated products are hiked, findings by the Daily Trust revealed.

These foreign companies include Flour Mills of Nigeria (FMN) led by Greek management; Crown Flour Mill (Olam Flour Mills) led by the Indians; Dufil Group (De United) also led by Indians; Life Flour Mills, which is largely foreign-owned; Kings Flour Mill, and Honeywell Flour Mill, which is controlled by Nigerian management.

Why flour price hike is a problem

Of recent, the prices of pastries, bread, and other products being produced with flour are on the increase, with many Nigerians complaining of hike in staple food. The increase is not limited to flour for making bread as it affects all related products such as semolina, pasta, and wheat offal. For instance, our correspondent in Maiduguri reported shortage of bread in the state capital yesterday.

This happened as a result of the strike action embarked upon by the bread bakers union on Thursday. The bakers were reportedly unhappy about the uncontrolled increase in the prices of wheat flour and other ingredients used in bread baking.

A resident who pleaded for anonymity said loaves of bread are no longer available for sale.

The Manager of My Lady's Bakery, Baga Road, Matthew Clement, said the union met and asked its members to down tools on Thursday because the price of bread had “remained constant at N400” while prices of wheat flour and other ingredients continued to increase.

However, bread price has risen in Kano and Abuja, a situation the association of bakery owners attributed to the increased price of flour and other ingredients.

Daily Trust reports that the increase began on Saturday and has affected bakeries in the state.

Secretary of the association in Kano, Kabiru Hassan Abdullahi, said they had no other alternative than to increase the price to reflect the market reality.

“It is true that we have increased the price and it took effect on Saturday. The truth is, we are into the business to make profit, and recently, there has been an increase of almost N4,000 in the price of a bag of flour,” Abdullahi confirmed.

Bread is a staple in many homes in Nigeria. In fact, it is easily accessible to other kinds of food. Both the rich and the poor consume bread, and it comes in various sizes, shapes, compositions, and price tags to meet the needs of different categories of consumers.

The bread and flour industry creates jobs - those directly employed by the industry, armies of bread distributors, sellers and hawkers all over the streets.

Reports showed that Nigeria is reputed to be the 12th largest instant noodle market in the world with a consumption of over 2 billion servings of noodles annually. However, this paper found that this multi-billion dollar market is controlled mostly by Indians with Indomie noodles, produced by Dufil, accounting for nearly 70 percent of the local noodles market.

The base raw material for bread flour, confectionery flour and noodle flour, semolina, and pasta production is wheat, and 99 percent of the 5.67 million metric tons valued at about $4.48 billion is imported annually without harnessing the local capacity, findings have shown.

According to statistics from the National Bureau of Statistics (NBS), wheat was sixth among the top 10 products imported in the first quarter of 2020. While the local farmers said there was capacity to grow enough to supply the flour millers in Nigeria, the data showed that N101.58 billion worth of Durum wheat was imported between January and March 2020.

A document obtained from authorities in the flour milling industry showed that six-core flour millers in Nigeria have 30,032 metric tons capacity of factories in the country.

The largest of these is Flour Mills of Nigeria (FMN) as it accounts for 39 percent of the entire capacity of flour mill firms in Nigeria. It is closely followed by Crown Flour Mills (Olam) with 38 percent of the entire capacity. These two firms combined occupy 77 percent of the flour market share in Nigeria.

It was learnt that Olam acquired three flour companies to become the second biggest flour miller in Nigeria. The firms it acquired are the Crown Flour Mill (CFM) from a Lebanese family of Chief Maan Lababidi in 2010, BUA Flour Mill from industrialist, Abdussamad Isiyaka Rabi in 2015, and Dangote Flour Mills in

Honeywell Flour Mill, which is the only firm with full Nigerian management only occupies nine percent of the local flour milling capacity with a metric ton of 2,600.

Dufil Group, which is run by Indians occupies 8 percent of flour millers' capacity (but its Indomie noodle brand is about 70 percent of the noodles market). Life Flour Mill, a foreign firm occupies 4 percent while Kings Flour Mill occupies two percent.

Different tales in other climes

While Nigeria is dominated by the foreign flour mills with attendant arbitrary hikes in the price of what they produce, the case is different in Ghana where the government regulates the terrain in order to protect the local market.

It was learnt that Olam (CFM) has a flour mill in Tema, Ghana, but the government resisted the move by the conglomerate to dominate the market.

In Nigeria, such companies have continued to increase the prices of their products even at the time of difficulties.

For instance, from the outset of the COVID-19 pandemic, CFM had between May and June 2020, increased the prices of bread flour, Semolina, pasta and allied products at different times.

They attributed the hike to the rise in foreign exchange (forex) from N360/$1 to over N400. However, although the forex increase is less than 10 percent difference, comparative analysis of the hike in flour and pasta showed that it increased by over 19 percent especially for products from CFM. The price review schedule obtained for CFM in Lagos shows that flour product price rose from N9,980 in April to N10,980 in June 2020, representing N1,790 increase (19.5%). For CFM's product price in Warri, Port Harcourt and Calabar, the price hike was from 19.2 percent to 19.5 percent. For instance, its mix and bake products rose from N9,630 in March to N11,130 in June; and N9,480 in March to N10,980 in June, which is a 19.5% hike.

Local industry threatened

Bakers in Nigeria have confirmed the price hike by largely foreign-dominated flour millers, saying the development was threatening the local industry.

Efforts to get the Association of Master Bakers and Caterers of Nigeria (AMBCN) to speak on the matter were not successful. However, the Premium Bakers Association of Nigeria (PBAN) confirmed that since March 2020, there had been an increase of N3,000 on a bag of flour just like other ingredients like sugar, butter and margarine.

The Public and Industrial Relations Officer of the association, Engr. Onuorah Emmanuel, told Daily Trust that if the bakers had been “inconsiderate” like the millers, many people would not be able to afford a loaf of bread.

“Beginning from March, they have added N3,000 to a bag of flour and sugar. Almost N6,000 has been added to the price of butter and margarine.

Olam, FMN keep, others mum over price hike

Repeated efforts to get the reaction of the Olam Flour Mill yielded no result up till the time of filing this report.

When contacted, Olam's Vice President, Corporate & Government Relations, Ade Adefeko, promised to get back to one of our reporters on the matter but failed to do so several days after. Reminder messages sent to him via WhatsApp were also not responded to.

It was a similar situation with Crown Flour Mills Ltd. A visit to its office at Tin Can Island Port, 2nd Gate, Behind Berth 1, Apapa, to get the reaction of the company did not yield results as our reporter was prevented from gaining access into the compound on the grounds that he needed a prior appointment to do so. It was the same story at Honeywell Flour Mill Limited located at Apapa in Lagos. The security operatives demanded an appointment confirmation to see any official and that without that, there will be no official dealing with our correspondent, though they were informed that it was a media enquiry.

Equally, efforts to get a direct response on this issue from the Flour Mills Nigeria Limited (FMN) did not yield results. A visit to FMN corporate headquarters at 1 Golden Penny Place, Wharf Road, Apapa, was also unsuccessful. The security personnel said the staff members take turns to come to the office and the person who could respond to our enquiries was not on seat.

However, the Head, Corporate Communications, Samuel Ibiroma, responded to our email enquiry, directing it from the Flour Milling Association of Nigeria (FMAN). In the response from FMAN, the Executive Secretary, Alhaji Olalekan Saliu confirmed the increase in the price of flour but said that was not peculiar to flour millers.

“The volatile nature of the forex market had sadly produced a devastating impact on the manufacturing industry like several other sectors of the Nigerian economy,” he said, he said. Responding to the allegation that flour millers do not treat wheat farmers fairly, he said it was false and misleading.

“Two of the critical stakeholders at the forefront of developing the wheat value chain in Nigeria are the Flour Milling Association of Nigeria (FMAN) and the Wheat Farmers Association of Nigeria (WFAN). FMAN is the umbrella organisation for all flour milling companies in Nigeria, while WFAN is an association which looks after the collective interests of wheat farmers across Nigeria.

“The relationship became stronger from 2016 when leaders of the two sides met at the offices of the Federal Ministry of Agriculture and Rural Development, Abuja and engaged in a series of deliberations to work out a Memorandum of Understanding (MoU) which was jointly agreed and signed on June 7, 2016.”

He said the highlights of the MoU included the firm undertaking (a guarantee) given by FMAN to off-take every grain of wheat produced by Nigerian wheat farmers as long as the grains met the specified parameters set out in the MoU.

Saliu said representatives of FMAN and WFAN met in Abuja on March 12, 2020 to review and revise the MoU, and to agree on the price for the current year.

“The revised MoU was jointly signed and dated by the leaders of FMAN and WFAN. The two parties agreed on a price of N170,000 per metric ton delivered to Kano (30% increase over last year). Due to the paucity of the last harvests (March/April 2020), prices had risen over and above the agreed price.

“Between June and July 2020, FMAN's aggregators visited prominent wheat markets, villages and towns in search of wheat to buy. They discovered that selling prices of wheat climbed up rapidly over and above the agreed N170,000 per metric ton to N180,000, then to N185,000. The aggregators continued to buy Nigerian wheat for FMAN until prices reached N200,000 per metric ton. The upward trend continued. Presently, prices are in the region of N230,000/N240,000 per metric ton,” he said.

Commission probes hike in flour, bread price

The Federal Competition and Consumer Protection Commission (FCCPC) confirmed that it was aware of the price rage in the flour industry and that it is probing these coordinated price increases in bread and flour.

In response to Daily Trust's inquiry on the rising cost of flour, bread and other pastries, the Director-General/Chief Executive Officer of the FCCPC, Barrister Babatunde Irukera said the commission became aware of a proposed 60 percent increase in the price of bread by a coordinated action of the bakers association.

He revealed that the FCCPC had met with the master bakers association to emphasize how the law prohibits competitors from coordinating in setting or changing prices.

Northern elders reject N1bn constitution review

• Recommends referendum • Engage us through legislative channel –Senate

By Victoria Onehi, Zakariyya Adaramola, Abdullateef Salau (Abuja), Abdullateef Aliyu (Lagos) & Victor Edozie (Port Harcourt)

The Northern Elders Forum (NEF) has faulted the Senate's call for memoranda on review of the 1999 Constitution, alleging that it is of no value and a predictable waste of time, resources and energy of Nigeria.

The forum's Director of Publicity and Advocacy, Dr Hakeem Baba-Ahmed, at a press conference in Abuja yesterday, asked Nigerians not to support the proposed constitution review "at this difficult time when the economy is facing unprecedented challenges."

Daily Trust reports that the National Assembly, since 2011, has been earmarking N1 billion for constitution review every four years.

Baba-Ahmed yesterday said the NEF advised the National Assembly to direct its energy and mandate towards convincing President Muhammadu Buhari to end the insurgency in the Northeast and killings in most parts of North-central and the Northwest and other parts of Nigeria.

He said the forum also advised the Senate to jettison "the wasteful idea of giving Nigerians the impression that it is involved in a serious review of our Constitution."

He said virtually every National Assembly, since 1999, had spent huge amounts of Nigerian people's money on "jamborees that give them false hope that the three arms of government respect the overwhelming desire of Nigerians for a holistic and genuine review and amendment of the 1999 Constitution."

Baba-Ahmed said nothing fundamental or of any value had come out of "these grand schemes to exploit our collective desire to address our political and economic fundamentals. This National Assembly is also following suit, and it should not be encouraged on this path".

According to him, Nigeria's future rests largely on its willingness to address major constraints to equity and justice, a functional structure, consistent good governance, security for all citizens, a credible electoral process, growing understanding between and among all groups and an economy that grows and narrows inequalities between and classes and regions.

"This cannot be achieved by a process that routinizes

• Afenifere, N/Delta leaders react

■ Northern Elders Forum's Director Publicity and Advocacy, Dr. Hakeem Baba Ahmed, during a press briefing in Abuja yesterday wasteful expenditure around false hopes.

"The legislature and executive branches of government have large quantities of reviews, recommendations and reports from past attempts at amending the constitutions. These represent enough resources for a review if the legislature is serious about this vital national priority. Even this is not likely to produce a genuine effort to address the basic requirements of securing a stable, secure and prosperous Nigeria, because both arms of this administration are unlikely to accept to put through wide-ranging reviews of the Constitution."

Baba-Ahmed said the Northern Elders Forum reminded legislators and other leaders from the North that security of the region's communities, reduction of crushing poverty and widening distrust among communities should be their priorities.

He said the forum recommended "the alternative of leaders of thought, elders, groups and professional organizations and representatives of government to freely discuss every element of our co-existence as a country under principles of voluntarism, genuine representation mutual respect and integrity of the process. A Nigerian Peoples' Conference on Review of the Constitution will benefit from past work in this direction in addition to contemporary challenges which the country needs to address in a context that allows free and productive engagements without pre-determined ends.

"The outcome of this Conference should be submitted to the two arms of government which should provide for a referendum in the Constitution so that Nigerians can directly decide on how they want their nation to be structured and function. The North is willing to discuss other options that will do justice to the current Constitution and the future of our great country."

He urged northern groups to be wary of being railroaded into making submissions "which the legislature will hold up as input, further justifying waste and deceit. No northern group should encourage further waste of public funds which should be channeled into battling killers, kidnappers, poverty and poor governance. The North wants a major review of the Constitution, but it is also ready to resist attempts to create wealth for a few while it leaves parts of the country to quarrel and blame each other for the state of the nation."

He said northerners were willing to discuss current challenges of the region and the state of the country with any group, anywhere, "provided it sees evidence of sincerity and respect for each other."

Engage us through legislative channel -- Senate replies NEF

The Senate yesterday, in its reaction, urged the Northern Elders Forum to engage it through proper legislative channel rather than news media.

Senate spokesperson, Senator Ajibola Basiru, in a response to Daily Trust enquiry last night, said thematic areas advertised for constitutional reforms cut across some of the concerns raised by the Forum.

He, therefore, enjoined the Forum to "encapsulate" its views in a memorandum to the Constitution Review Committee.

He said: "Even though they are entitled to their views, the question to ask is; does it mean that if former legislatures cum executive (administrations) have possibly or allegedly failed in this regard, then it can never be achieved?"

"Their (Northern Elders Forum) statement even implied an agreement by them that there is need for fundamental restructuring exercise which is the purpose of the present endeavour of the 9th National Assembly.

"Their views can be encapsulated in a memorandum to the Constitution Review Committee.

"The thematic areas advertised for constitutional reforms cut across some of the concerns they raised and therefore we shall be glad to engage them through proper legislative channel rather than news media."

Afenifere disagrees with Northern Elders Forum

The spokesman of the Yoruba socio-cultural organization, Afenifere, Mr. Yinka Odumakin, told one of our correspondents yesterday that while Afenifere agreed with the Northern Elders' Forum that the previous constitution review exercises had amounted to wasted efforts, the country must not stop the exercise.

He, however, said the proposed exercise must achieve a result and must be a radical departure from the previous exercises.

He said Nigeria was faced with a constitutional crisis that had stymied its growth over the years, saying the country must return to "a proper federal constitution." He said: "I don't think we should not do it as it is. There's no difference between those doing the review exercise with no result and those who want it to be held every year. Nigeria has a present constitutional disorder and crisis and we need a federal constitution.

"So, we agree with the NEF that a wasted exercise gives no prospect, but to say that we should not do anything because the right thing has not been done is not the way forward for the country.

"What we're saying is that we should go ahead with the process that would move the country forward and give us a new constitutional order. We should not just do an exercise just for the sake of spending money on the National Assembly."

Also speaking, a prominent member of Pan Niger Delta Forum, Sara Igbe, said constitution review was needed to address all problems affecting the six geo-political zones.

"The northerners are not ready for constitutional review and that is why they're avoiding any proposed move to review the constitution. The review of the constitution is not in bad faith because such review is what will address all the lingering problems that affects all geo political zone of the country. The proposed review of the constitution is not a bad idea and I don't see the reason why the Northern Elders Forum will not support it," he said.

However, a prominent Niger Delta leader, Wenenda Wali, who is the convener of a Port Harcourt-based pressure group, Rivers Unity House, said in principle, the Northern Elders Forum was correct "because our problem is not bad laws, but non-implementation of the existing laws.

"I agree with the NEF that constitutional amendment process now is more of ego tripping than anything done in the national interest. Unfortunately, we won't see the position of the NEF as in national interest because of mindset about the quarter it is coming from. Let's just test the limits of the existing laws first."

FG announces N600bn stimulus package for farmers

By Vincent A Yusuf

The Federal Government has resolved to inject over N600 billion as a stimulus response into the nation's agriculture sector.

The fund would target small scale farmers to ensure food security and sustainability.

The Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development, Muhammad Sabo Nanono, disclosed this at the weekend while on a tour of Dangote Fertiliser Plant and during a crucial meeting with other fertilizer companies in Lagos State, aimed at seeking their cooperation for input production, a statement from the ministry said yesterday.

Nanono said the stimulus response targeting farmers nationwide would take off with an initial 2.4 million farmers in the first instance.

He, however, noted that to avoid the abuse of government funds and good intentions, the support would be in kind (in form of inputs) and not cash as was the practice in the past.

The minister said the closure of all international borders, necessitated by the COVID-19 pandemic, had made it evident that Nigeria could conveniently and sustainably feed itself.

A statement by Dangote Fertilizer Limited, quoted Nanono as affirming that the $2 billion Dangote Fertilizer plant had been fully completed and set for commissioning in the coming months.

The minister described the company as very important to the achievement of the Federal Government's agricultural transformation agenda intended to boost food security in the country.

Nanono said: "The capacity of Dangote Fertilizer is enough to change the way fertilizer is being used in this country. We are going to complement his efforts and support him in this regard. The challenge of the supply of fertilizer is going to be solved by the Dangote Fertilizer plant. I can now go home and sleep."

"The Federal Government wants to make sure that Nigerians have enough food to eat. We can only achieve the objective with enough fertilizer in the country. I am extremely proud of Aliko Dangote for what he is doing in this country. I think no other person has probably done half of what he is doing in the area of investment.

"If we can have just additional two of his type, this country will be completely different. I think all we have been trying to do as far as agricultural development is concerned, has been captured by the Dangote Fertilizer plant. Nigeria has a potential for agriculture. Obviously, Dangote Fertiliser is going to help the government and the farmers."

He sought the assistance of the company for the government's agricultural mechanisation scheme as well as extension services for small scale farmers.

He said the support was necessary for the success of the mechanisation scheme which, according to him, is expected to cover 632 local government areas across Nigeria.

The minister said: "There is need for us to support small scale farmers who have been helping the government in respect to food security. Once the small-scale farmers get all the necessary support, there will be agricultural revolution in this country.

"Some of you will remember when the Federal Government initiated a policy to support local production of rice in Nigeria and discourage the importation of rice. Some vested interest kicked against it. The breakout of COVID-19 pandemic and the closure of Nigerian borders, shows that the Federal Government took the right decision regarding rice policy. Now, we are eating our own rice. The small-scale farmers have also been contributing to Nigeria's self-sufficiency in rice production in the country."

Fani Kayode reminds us a lesson in journalism -Buhari's spokesman

By Muideen Olaniyi

The Senior Special Assistant to the President on Media and Publicity, Garba Shehu, says the recent verbal attack by a former Minister of Aviation, Femi Fani-Kayode, on Daily Trust reporter in Cross River, Eyo Charles, is a reminder of a course in journalism which points out that "there is no stupid question, only stupid answers".

Shehu, on his twitter handle @GarShehu, yesterday said: "In journalism 101, you learn that there is no stupid question, only stupid answers. A former Nigerian minister just brought home this lesson."

Last Tuesday, there was an outrage across Nigeria following a viral video, which showed Fani-Kayode threatening to deal with Charles on August 20 during a roundtable with journalists in Calabar.

Charles had asked Fani-Kayode to explain who was sponsoring his trips from one state to another "to supervise projects."

The former minister has apologized following the barrage of criticisms that trailed his outburst.

Politicians arming, deploying thugs for Edo, Ondo elections – IGP

The Inspector-General of Police, Mohammed Adamu, has ordered the Edo and Ondo States' Commissioners of Police to rejig preparations ahead of the governorship elections coming up in both states.

The Force spokesman, Frank Mba, in a statement yesterday, said the order was to accommodate and address the threats and emerging trends as contained in the Election Security Threat Assessment Reports.

Mba said the IGP gave the order after reviewing the assessment reports submitted by the CPs from both states ahead of the elections slated for September 19 and October 10 respectively.

He said the report had revealed, amongst other indicators: arming and movement of political thugs, use of inciting statements during political campaigns, high likelihood of violence and possible cross attack by political opponents.

Mba said other revelations in the report are misinformation/ disinformation aimed at heating up the polity and deliberate efforts at delegitimizing government institutions involved in the electoral processes.

He said the I-G had warned politicians and their supporters in the two states, to conduct themselves properly, play by the rules and steer clear of tendencies capable of undermining the electoral process.

He said the Force leadership was evolving customized security architecture to protect the people and ensure hitch free elections in the two states.

He said the police would not hesitate to bring the full weight of the law on anyone or group that would want to sabotage the security arrangement being emplaced for the elections.

Mba pledged the commitment of IG to protect the sanctity of the ballot in the elections.

He said that the police would remain neutral, apolitical and work with all stakeholders in ensuring a level playing ground for all in the elections. (NAN)

Buhari reiterates support for primary healthcare

President Muhammadu Buhari has promised to continue strengthening the primary healthcare system and the inbuilt routine immunization strategy, using various data and technology driven tools.

Buhari, represented by the Minister of Health, Dr Osagie Ehanire, made the promise at the Africa Polio-Free certificate celebration, on Saturday in Abuja.

"We shall deploy the valuable material and human resource for health assets that have been built up over the decades of fighting polio.

"Towards the goal of supporting the prevention of other disease patterns, strengthening our health system, as we are currently doing with the COVID-19 pandemic response," he said.

The president said that it was a good example of what the country could achieve collectively as a people, when they work together.

"We gather to celebrate the certification of Nigeria and with us the continent of Africa, as polio free.

"Our own certification is the result of the collective efforts of many devoted and enthusiastic individuals, organizations who believed in the vision of a polio-free Nigeria and went over and beyond the ordinary to add value to the ideal," Buhari said. (NAN)

2 feared killed, many injured, as Shi'ites, police clash in Kaduna

From Maryam Ahmadu-Suka, Kaduna

Two members of the Sheikh Ibrahim Zakzaky-led Islamic Movement in Nigeria (IMN), otherwise known as Shi'ites, were reported killed when they clashed with men of the Nigeria Police in Kaduna yesterday.

Our correspondent gathered that gunshots were heard around the popular Ahmadu Bello Way yesterday afternoon, apparently as police made efforts to disperse the protesting IMN members.

The IMN group of the Shi'ites Islamic sect was out in protest to press home their demand for the release of their leader, Sheikh Ibrahim Zakzaky and his wife, Zeenat, who has been in detention since December 2015 following their bloody clash with soldiers in Zaria.

Meanwhile, Kaduna State Government had since outlawed the group and prohibited all forms of protest in the state.

However, a leader of IMN told Daily Trust yesterday that two of their members were killed during yesterday's clash, while several others were injured.

"As we speak, we are working on our press release. There was a clash and two of our members were killed by police. Several other members were also injured," he said.

When contacted, Kaduna State Police Command spokesman, ASP Muhammad Jalige said he was yet to receive a signal on the incident.

According to him, "I called the DPO in charge of the area, he didn't pick; maybe he was busy containing the situation. But as soon as I get details about the incident, I will call you."

Kano spends N3.4bn on free, compulsory education - Ganduje

From Sani Ibrahim Paki, Kano

Kano State Government has spent over N3.4 billion in implementing free and compulsory education in the state, Governor Abdullahi Umar Ganduje has said.

He stated this in Kano during the presentation of N20 million cheque to the 44 local government areas of the state on Saturday, which amounts to N880 million. He said the disbursement of the funds was to complement the rehabilitation and renovation of primary schools across the state.

Ganduje said, "Kano has earmarked more than 26% of its annual budget to education which is in line with the internationally agreed formula of UNESCO.

"We are able to raise this amount by releasing 5% of our Internally Generated Revenue (IGR), 5% of local governments' statutory funds, 2% of every contract awarded in our state alongside the contribution from Universal Basic Education Commission (UBEC), and other international development partners to education."

■ Governor Umar Ganduje

The governor added that the state was able to record the achievement because it has the political will, strong institutions provided adequate finances and promoted community participation.

Also speaking, the executive secretary of the State Universal Basic Education Board (SUBEB), Alhaji Danlami Hayyo said the state has used the N3.4 billion to construct over 407 classrooms and renovated more than 700 dilapidated ones; constructed over 460 toilets, provided 40,000 seats, as well as constructed 200 boreholes in schools across the state.

"Before the introduction of free and compulsory education in Kano, we used to have only 1.5million children in our school, today after the implementation of the policy, there are over 3.8m children in schools," he said.

Similarly, the state commissioner for education, Sanusi Sa'id Kiru said the state has already built 3 Almajiri boarding schools in the senatorial districts and also planning to build additional 130 girl schools to complement the state's policy.

SSANU warns FG over looming industrial action

From Jeremiah Oke, Ibadan

The Senior Staff Association of Nigerian Universities (SSANU), yesterday, warned that non-teaching staff would also proceed on strike as soon as schools are reopened if the federal government refused to address its demands.

The latest warning came against the backdrop of a renewed hope for an end to the prolonged strike by the Academic Staff Union of Universities (ASUU).

National Vice

President of SSANU Alfred Jimoh, who stated this at a press conference held at the SSANU office, University of Ibadan, said the hope of having a peaceful post COVID-19 industrial atmosphere in universities would only be a mirage, except issues such as unpaid arrears of earned allowances, inadequacies of the Integrated Personnel Payroll Information System (IPPIS) and double deduction of pension are addressed.

The union described as saddening that the earned allowances of non-teaching staff that arose from the 2009 FG/SSANU agreement was still largely unattended to, despite repeated industrial actions on the issue.

Pointing to various correspondences with the federal government, SSANU lamented the nonchalant attitude of the government to issues affecting non-teaching staff of Nigerian universities, while treating teaching staff as 'demi-god'.

Gunmen kill lawmaker in Bayelsa

From Basse Willie, Yenagoa

Gunmen suspected to be armed robbers, on Saturday night, shot and killed the Councilor representing Ward 6 in Sagbama Local Government Area of Bayelsa State, Hon. Karma Agagowei.

Hon. Agagowei was killed along Opolo axis of Yenagoa Local Government Area while returning from the Peoples Democratic Party (PDP) ward congress for selection of ad-hoc delegates in preparation for the senatorial by-election in Bayelsa West.

The deceased was rushed to two different hospitals in Yenagoa, but was denied treatment for lack of a police report. He died some minutes later.

Another person, who was with the deceased in a commercial tricycle at the time of the incident, was attacked with machetes by the hoodlums but fled with injuries.

When contacted, Police spokesman in Bayelsa, SP Anisim Butswat, said the matter had not been reported to the Police yet, but promised to find out and get back soon.

Zamfara threatens death penalty on reckless driving

From Shehu Umar, Gusau

Governor Bello Mohammed Matawalle of Zamfara State has threatened to introduce death penalty on reckless driving in the state.

The governor made the assertion when he led members of his Executive Council and the Management of BUA Group on a condolence visit to the Emir of Gusau, Alhaji Ibrahim Bello, over the death of 16 persons from the emirate in an auto crash last Wednesday.

He affirmed that he would not hesitate to introduce death sentence on reckless drivers, adding that such drivers would be compelled by law to pay compensation for every lost life.

The governor expressed displeasure over the death of the victims as a result of reckless driving by a truck driver who ran into their vehicles and killed them along Gusau-Funtua road.

He announced a donation of N2 million to families of each of the deceased who had a wife and N1.5 million to families of those unmarried among them.

The governor likewise declared that he would put the next of kin of each of the victims on a monthly allowance of N50,000 each. This, he said, would continue till the end of his tenure as governor of the state.

He said his administration would introduce speed limit gauge on highways as well as weight measurement on trucks and drug tests on drivers in order to guard against rough and reckless driving which usually ends in fatalities.

Matawalle noted that the measures had become necessary so that drivers and their families would no longer think they would have it easy if they kill anyone through recklessness, adding that the lives of the citizens of the state are more valuable than any other thing.

He urged the management of BUA Company to call their drivers to order and caution them on an acceptable speed limit.

He described the accident which claimed the 16 lives as monumental, and called on the families of the deceased to consider it as an act of Allah, praying that the deceased persons' souls will be accepted in Jannatul Firdaus.

Earlier, the team leader from BUA, Engr. Aminu Suleiman, said they were in the state to condole with the government, Gusau emirate, people of the state, and the immediate families of those who were killed as a result of an accident involving the company's driver.

Flood: Kwara residents asked to relocate

From Ismail Adebayo, Ilorin

The National Emergency Management Agency (NEMA) has warned people residing in lowland areas and along river banks in Kwara State to relocate to higher grounds to escape floods in view of threats posed by rains.

Speaking during the flag-off of the distribution of humanitarian relief support to persons in about 528 households affected by rain/windstorm in four local government areas of the state, the NEMA Director-

General, Muhammed Alhaji Muhammadu, represented by the Head of NEMA, Minna Operations Office (Niger and Kwara), Mrs Wagami Lydia, also advised those in metropolitan areas to avoid indiscriminate dumping of refuse in culverts/drainage.

It would be recalled that the Nigerian Meteorological Agency (NIMET) had earlier said that 28 states in the country, including Kwara, Kogi, Nasarawa, and Benue are prone to impending flood disaster from September 6, 2020.

The NEMA boss said people should adhere strictly to building codes in order to prevent the flood, and urged Kwara residents to ensure the use of quality building materials in erecting structures, saying "This will at least reduce re-occurrence of disasters caused by storms."

The NEMA boss admonished beneficiaries to make judicious use of the relief items which were facilitated by Senator Yahaya Oloriegbe, representing Kwara Central senatorial district.

Rice scarcity: RIFAN to mobilise 1m rice farmers

Aliyu M. Hamagam, Birnin Kebbi

In a move to mitigate the looming danger of rice scarcity and the continued escalation in its price, the federal government has directed the Rice Farmers Association of Nigeria (RIFAN) to mobilise 1 million farmers capable of producing 5 million metric tonnes of rice in this year's dry season farming.

The National President of RIFAN, Alhaji Aminu Goronyo, who was part of Kebbi State governor's entourage for on-the-spot assessment of flood destruction on farmlands, made this known yesterday in Kebbi State.

Goronyo said the federal government support for this year's dry season farming would be coming through Central Bank of Nigeria (CBN), and assured the flood victims that officials from the CBN would soon arrive in Kebbi State for assessment with a view to providing immediate intervention.

"The CBN governor had directed RIFAN to mobilise 1 million farmers that can quickly produce five million metric tonnes during the dry farming season commencing in November 2020, for support," he said.

In his remark after visiting the sites of the flood disaster in Augie, Argungu, and Arewa local government areas, the Kebbi State governor, Abubakar Atiku Bagudu, expressed optimism that the country would surmount the problem.

He assured the farmers that the federal government, with the help of some of its institutions, like the CBN and other organisations, would respond to the problem effectively.

"The president would soon summon a meeting of the National Food Security Council and the problem of flood disasters, among others, would be discussed," he said.

Ghana defends $1m levy on Nigerian traders

● says Nigeria took steps that affected other nations

The Ghanaian Minister of Information, Kojo Nkrumah, yesterday justified the $1m trade levy and other regulations imposed on Nigerian traders in Ghana.

Nkrumah was reacting to a statement last week by the Nigerian Minister of Information and Culture, Lai Mohammed, that 825 Nigerians were deported from Ghana in one year.

Mohammed had also said Nigeria was worried by attacks and harassment of her nationals and the progressive acts of hostility towards the country by Ghanaian authorities.

But yesterday, Nkrumah Nkrumah accused Nigerian traders in Ghana of trade violations which, he said, included "tax evasion, immigration offences, trading in substandard products, violation of the Ghana Investment Promotion Centre law, improper registration of firms, underpayment of business operating permits, falsification of documents, among others."

On the statement by Lai Mohammed that 825 Nigerians were deported between January 2018 and February 2019, Nkrumah said 700 Nigerians involved in fraud, prostitution, and armed robbery were deported from Ghana.

"The Federal Republic (Nigeria), on the other hand, is on record to have taken a number of steps in recent months, in pursuit of her national interests, which have gravely affected other countries in the region.

"These include the closure of Nigeria's Seme Krake border from August 2019 to date and the issuance of executive orders by Nigeria's Presidency preventing foreigners from getting jobs which Nigerians can do, to mention a few," Nkrumah said.

He said: "The President of the Republic of Ghana, H.E. Nana Addo Dankwa Akufo-Addo, who values very much his excellent relations with the President of the Federal Republic of Nigeria, His Excellency Muhammadu Buhari, will engage President Buhari with a view to develop immediately a framework for validating claims of ill treatment of citizens of either country, and ensure citizens enjoy the full exercise of their rights, while respecting the sovereignty and laws of both countries.

FG, Bangladesh launch postage stamps

By Zakariyya Adaramola

The Nigerian Postal Service and the Bangladesh High Commission have jointly issued a set of commemorative postage stamps in honour of the Bangladesh Father of nation, Sheikh Mujibur Rahman.

Speaking at the launch at the Bangladesh High Commission in Abuja, the Postmaster-General of the Federation, Dr Ismail Adewusi, said the commemorative stamp was a gesture of Nigeria in strengthening the already affable relationship between the two countries.

Nigeria issued its first postage stamp about 146 years ago, a concept that has continued to grow and expand to include collaboration between countries.

Meanwhile, the Corporate Affairs Commission has endorsed Nigerian Postal Service, EMS/Parcel as one of the official couriers of the commission.

The NIPOST, in a statement, said the endorsement followed the success in the interview conducted by CAC for prospective courier companies.

NIPOST stated that business transactions would commence officially on 1st September 2020.

It added that with the new development, NIPOST was officially endorsed to accept and deliver the certificates of incorporation from clients across the country.

It also said that NIPOST remains the organization with the widest reach across Nigeria for safe and efficient courier delivery.

"Following NIPOST's success in the interview conducted by CAC for prospective courier companies, we are pleased to announce the endorsement and accreditation of EMS/Parcel as one of the official couriers of the commission.

"Business transactions will commence on 1st September 2020", it said.

Buhari, Emefiele, others for virtual CIBN banking, finance conference

President Muhammadu Buhari, among over 2,500 participants across the globe, are expected to participate in a virtual Banking and Finance Conference being organised by the Chartered Institute of Bankers of Nigeria.

Patrick Akinwuntan, Chairman, Consultative Committee of 13th Annual Banking and Finance Conference and MD/CEO, Ecobank Nigeria, made the disclosure in a statement on Sunday in Lagos.

Akinwuntan said that the conference with the theme: "Facilitating a Sustainable Future: The Role of Banking and Finance" will hold on Sept.15 and Sept. 16.

According to him, the chief host of the conference would be Godwin Emefiele, the governor of the Central Bank of Nigeria and Mr Bayo Olujobi, CIBN President would be the host.

"In view of the COVID-19 pandemic, this year's edition of the conference will be executed using the hybrid of virtual and physical platforms, with strict adherence to the preventive protocols against the spread of the pandemic.

"While over 2,500 participants across the globe are expected to participate virtually, there will be two physical locations for the conference," Akinwuntan stated.

He said that the Congress Hall, Transcorp Hilton Hotel, Abuja and the Ijewere Hall of the Bankers House, Victoria Island, Lagos would be locations for the conference.

According to him, the conference will feature five business and two break-out sessions.

It will provide participants a platform to connect with other professionals and industry stakeholders across the world.

The conference chairman further said that the conference would brainstorm on strategic issues that are critical to building a sound and sustainable financial ecosystem and economy. (NAN)

CISLAC, 38 other CSOs flay suspension of Reps' activities

By Balarabe Alkassim

The Civil Society Legislative Advocacy Centre and 38 other Civil Society Organisation have faulted the National Assembly over the suspension of committee activities and other legislative activities by the House of Representatives.

The CSOs, in a jointly signed statement yesterday, said: "We dare say that even if this decision was taken with good intentions, it's ill-advised, ill-timed and unhelpful as it fuels all forms of conspiracy theories and interpretation of collusion and attempt to cover up fraud, especially given that the National Assembly is already plagued by a lack of credibility or public trust."

Reacting, the House Leader, Alhassan Ado Doguwa, in a text message to our correspondent, explained: "As a body of principal officers, we met and resolved that largely due to the present global health crisis of COVID-19 and lack of necessary protocol arrangements in place at the National Assembly, we needed to suspend committee programmes and activities till we resume when perhaps steps might have been taken to address such challenges."

72 HEARTY CHEERS to our PATRIARCH!

Your four decades of skillful and selfless leadership isn't only about the massive grassroots infrastructural development we see in Jigawa of today, but also the reality in our existence as the most united and organic political family in Nigeria.

The Jigawa State PDP family is a unique and proud asset of our great party and one of the possible bearers of its future and indeed even that of the country.

Your value-driven leadership and three generations of loyal and dedicated followers have you being the only remaining PDP founding member still active and visible in the party, and you have also bequeathed to the nation the most viable intergenerational power succession system on ground.

You have successfully introduced yesterday into today and beyond into the future. You have effortlessly succeeded in what many others had failed after so much efforts. You represent an enigma, and even a political nightmare to many, but yet a pleasant myth that comes as gentle as a whisper to those of us ever loyal to your cause.

How you achieved so much all in a single lifetime would be left for political scientists and sociologists to decipher in the fullness of time.

As you add yet another year to your very accomplished life, we besiege Allah SWT to increase you in wisdom, health and the patience to take us and the whole of our dear country Nigeria, to the land of our dreams.

Happy birthday our dear Patriarch, Dr. Sule Lamido, CON.

371 days after shutdown, flights resume at Enugu Airport

...airport to be in second phase of concession- FG

From Abdullateef Aliyu, Lagos

371 days after shutdown, the Akanu Ibiam International Airport, Enugu, was formally reopened yesterday and ready for commercial flights.

The airport was shut down on August 24, 2019, with President Muhammadu Buhari approving N10 billion special intervention funds for the rehabilitation works.

The rehabilitation work comprised the scraping and resurfacing of a bad stretch of the runway, which was dilapidated, while the runway was further extended to accommodate bigger aircraft.

The airport was also equipped with a new Category Two (CAT2) instrument landing system (ILS), airfield lighting, taxi lighting, link away, emergency operation centre (EOC), car park, perimeter fencing, perimeter road, pilot lounge, among other facilities to aid in safe flight operations.

Also, the Federal Airports Authority of Nigeria (FAAN), the manager of the airport has done the requisite floor marking and other COVID-19 protocols ahead of the return of commercial flights.

Daily Trust reports that to facilitate the repair work, the state government, according to Governor Ifeanyi Ugwuanyi, demolished several structures which are causing obstructions to safe flight operations, which include five units of two storey-building, 14 units of one-storey building, a cathedral church, relocation of Enugu Broadcasting Station transmission mast, among others.

At the reopening were prominent Southeast leaders led by the Chairman of South-East Governors' Forum, Governor Dave Umahi of Enugu State; Minister of Foreign Affairs, Geoffrey Onyeama; Minister of Labour, Dr. Chris Ngige; Chairman, Senate Committee on Aviation, Senator Smart Adeyemi (APC, Kogi West); Former Deputy Senate President, Ike Ekweremadu; Chairman, House Committee on Aviation, Hon. Nnolim Nnaji; Director-General, Voice of Nigeria, Osita Okechukwu, among others.

The minister said local and international flights would commence immediately at the airport, adding that the airport would be in the second phase of the concession programme of the federal government.

Sirika also assured that the federal government would focus on delivering the cargo terminal and the international terminal buildings under construction, saying he just approved the sum of N1 billion for the contractor to fast-track the delivery of the project.

The minister also promised to approve all international airlines that show interest in flying to the airport, which he noted has been upgraded and designed to meet the highest standard obtainable in any airport globally.

According to him, contrary to the clamour by stakeholders to restrict international flights only to Lagos and Abuja, he is ready to allow international flights to any part of the country to lessen the financial burden of businessmen and women who had to travel to Lagos and Abuja for international flights.

Chairman of the South-East Governors' Forum, Dave Umahi of Enugu State said the decision to close down the airport was a very hard decision taken by the people of the Southeast "with mixed minds."

President-General of Ohaneze Ndigbo, Chief John Nwodo said he never believed the rehabilitation of the Enugu Airport could happen "with such rapidity" that it had been delivered.

Advertorial

Seeing the 100% success rates of their predecessors in UTME and SSCE serves as additional motivation for our students Interview granted by Mallam Sheriff Olashinde, Director Al-Hijrah College, to the media on August 28, 2020.

Q: How come we don't read about any particular Al-Hijrah College student winning national and international academic competitions?

A: Our strategy is to ensure that all our students are winners. We quite understand what it takes to identify and coach 0.1% of your students to win such competitions. We have chosen a deliberate strategy of focusing on the success of 100% of our students, both in WAEC and in UTME. We don't fault other schools for being different, we are quite happy with our students results - 100% of them.

That is why, when you review our statistics, we publish the results of all our students, unlike most schools that celebrate exceptional success cases once in a few years, we celebrate everyone of our students. Alhamdulillah, they have all been winners.

In fact, in our history, our lowest UTME score has been 192 and that was in the year 2016. We have had a total of just four UTME scores of 200 or less in all the years combined. In the last WAEC, about 75% of our students had seven or more distinctions, that included both English Language and Mathematics. Success of all our students in the UTME and SSCE are our focus, not having one student win an international competition once in every five years.

Q: Many schools flaunt outstanding results but the prevalence of examination malpractices in our society makes it hard to believe these results. Are your results any different?

A: Examination malpractice is a cancer destroying the very fabric of our education system specifically, and our society as a whole. It kills the best in these kids and makes them a burden on the society in the long run.

It is unIslamic to cheat in an examination. It is a matter of our faith. So, we do everything required to ensure examination malpractices can not occur in our environment.

Generally, students and their teachers resort to cheating for three reasons. Firstly, when they can't see a path to success without cheating. Secondly, when the environments where the examinations are being conducted are enabling malpractices. Finally, when there is a belief that those who cheat will suffer no negative consequences.

We address all three effectively. Because all our students know that they only have themselves to rely upon to succeed in all examinations, they put their best efforts to study appropriately, right from JSS1. Seeing the 100% success rates of their predecessors in UTME and SSCE serves as additional motivation for our students, their parents and our staff to believe in their abilities to succeed without compromise.

We pay a great deal of attention to the learning processes, not just the final results. This way, our students, their parents and staff are confident of the input and thus have no reason to resort to malpractices.

Since the year 2017, we deploy CCTV to monitor all our external examinations to ensure we can always go back and review the video, should the need arise. Our staff are not allowed in our external examination halls, from the moment the question papers are unsealed.

Finally, every one of our students, alumni and their parents can attest to the integrity of the conducts of our examinations. Our alumni are in most top universities in the country, anyone can walk to them and interview any of them.

Q: Mathematics determines who progresses through secondary school with smile or otherwise. Your WAEC results showed a 100% pass rate; how do you achieve this?

A: It is about creating a system that works for each and every child according to their individual level. Maths remains the only subject in which a student can score 100% everytime. We have come to recognise that every kid has the potential to excel in Maths with the possible exception of those with significant learning disabilities.

No student of the Al-Hijrah College has ever failed Maths at SSCE.

84% of our Class of 2019 had distinctions in WAEC Maths, and our average Maths score in the 2020 UTME is 80%.

And this isn't about any 'Maths brain'. The school's pass mark in its JSS1 entrance examination is 40% in Maths (Ugo C Ugo's level of difficulties). Any applicant who scores less than 40% in Maths is given special test to determine if he or she has severe learning difficulties. Once proven not to have severe learning difficulties, even those who score below 40% in Maths are admitted.

That has been the policy for the last nine years and the system has not failed a single kid to date, alhamdulillah.

Q: So, how does Al-Hijrah College teach Maths?

Firstly we build the confidence of each student in his or her ability to excel in Maths. Depending on the confidence levels upon admission, some get to be with us for three years before they start seeing Maths for what it is - a surmountable challenge.

Secondly, and most importantly, we monitor the progress of each student keenly to determine necessary interventions. Those challenged in Maths, we refer to them as Exceptional Students, are tracked, and coached separately, until they overcome their challenges.

Finally, we don't joke with Maths. In fact, all our JSS1, JSS2, SSS1, and SSS2 students are currently having Maths Online Summer Holiday Extension Classes - Monday to Friday.

Summarily, our results in Maths is made possible by guidance of Allah and dedication to the subject.

Q: Listening to you, one may conclude that everything is perfect in Al-Hijrah College. Are you perfect?

A: Subhannallah, only Allah is perfect. We have a lot of rooms for improvement. We are quite unhappy with our performances in the Arabic Language SSCE.

In accordance with our policy, each of our students must take nine subjects in the GCE at the end of his or her SSS2 classes. The subjects must include the Islamic Studies and Arabic Language, even for those aspiring to be engineers or medical doctors. Typically, after SSS2, most students drop these two subjects after the GCE to focus on the other subjects they will be taking in their UTME and SSS3 WAEC.

In the end of SSS2 GCE, nearly all our students have credit or better in six or more subjects, including English Language, Mathematics, Islamic Studies, Economics, Physics, Chemistry, Further Mathematics, Government, and Biology. Regrettably, our students mostly score D7 or E8 in Arabic Language.

Unlike Economics, Physics, Chemistry, Further Mathematics, Government and Biology which the students had studied only for two years at the time of the GCE, our students would have been studying the Arabic Language for five years (from JSS1) if not earlier in primary schools. In fact, nearly all of our students do very well in Arabic Language in their end of JSS3 BECE.

So, we find it very frustrating that our efforts at having every student excel in the Arabic Language are not translating to success at the GCE.

Q: What do you think is the reason why your average student, with distinctions in seven or more subjects, aren't passing the Arabic Language?

A: We have reached out to dozens of other top schools across the country and discovered that we all share the same abysmal records in the Arabic Language at the SSCE level. We understand that the situation is so pathetic that several Arabic Language degree programmes in Nigerian universities are facing potential closure because there aren't enough applicants. You can't confidently apply to study the Arabic Language in the university without a credit pass in the subject at the SSCE level.

It seems as if, the examiners who came up with the syllabi and the marking schemes of the SSCE Arabic Language have the objective of phasing out Arabic Language from the SSCE and Nigerian universities. Else, the grading would give every student an equal chance of scoring a distinction in Economics, Physics, Chemistry, Further Mathematics, Government, Biology and Arabic Language alike, given an equal level of commitment to these subjects. The examiners have to know what they are doing when a kid can spend more time on Arabic Language than Physics, Chemistry and Further Mathematics combined; while scoring distinctions in each of these three subjects, the kid may still fail the Arabic Language. Already we struggle to convince the parents of our students to register their children for the Arabic Language. We leave these Arabic Language examiners to Allah who will judge them. Allah knows their intentions.

Q: A good number of your students are in top Canadian, American and European Universities; how do you combine Nigerian, Canadian, American, and British Curricula?

A: We have natural advantages over many others when it comes to the issue of preparation of our students for international university admissions for two main reasons.

Firstly, the founding fathers of Al-Hijrah College, who are our board members, have the benefit of education in Canada, UK, France, Malaysia, Ukraine, USA, South Africa, China, The Netherlands, Philippines, and Norway.

Secondly, amongst our students are nationals of USA, Canada, UK, Ireland, and France. So, we have the parents of these international students partnering with us as we prepare their kids for their university admissions.

Therefore, the key to our students success in international admissions is a strategy that builds on our founders' wealth of practical experiences and those of our international customers.

Please note the following four facts. The so called American Curriculum and Canadian Curriculum are unknown in America and in Canada respectively. These curricula are introduced in Nigeria for marketing purposes, to give uninformed parents comfort that their children are following some alien standards. The following two comments explain this better.

"The American curriculum (although a better name would be '50 states 50 curricula').... The very name 'American Curriculum' is a misnomer. All fifty states and most major cities/school districts set their own curriculum frameworks, priorities, funding, standards, tests and scheduling." ~ www.goodschoolsguide.co.uk

"Canada does not have a national curriculum; rather, the provincial governments are responsible for establishing the curriculum for their schools, and each province has its own, ministry-established common curriculum." ~ www.ncee.org

The second fact we want you to note is that, practically, all top international universities admit foreign students who are at least 17 or 18 years old. Most students complete their SSS3 in Nigeria at age 16 or less. Rarely is a 16 years old, male or female child, matured enough for independent life, and study, half the world away.

Thirdly, nearly all these universities conclude their admission cycles by May, for students resuming in September, even for their local applicants. These universities conclude international admission decisions much earlier to give these applicants ample time to process their student visas. For instance, Canadian student visas can sometimes take five months to process.

Fourthly, an applicant needs two things to gain admission into any top university across the globe - excellent academic performances in his or her local final high school examinations (in our case WAEC), and knowledge of the requirements that must be met to submit a successful application to the specific university of interest, doing the right things at the right times.

For instance, despite thousands of kids doing Cambridge IGCSE and Cambridge A/L examinations in Nigeria, year after year, there is a total of just 11 (eleven) Nigerian undergraduate students in the Cambridge University (<https://www.undergraduate.study.cam.ac.uk/nigeria>). That is, an average of less than four Nigerian undergraduates are admitted yearly by the university. Since Cambridge IGCSE and Cambridge A/L are not even compulsory for admission into the Cambridge University, some of these eleven Nigerians may not have taken either of these two examinations. In addition, a number of these Nigerian undergraduate students would have attended UK based high schools.

Q: So, how do your students prepare for admission into top international universities?

Using our knowledge of all the four facts mentioned above, we break down the process of preparing our students for international admissions into two phases, phase one being the UTME and WAEC.

Rather than attempting to overstretch our students with multiple international curricula, we focus on making sure they come out with the best results possible in their UTME and WAEC. It may interest you to learn that even for our students intending to study abroad, we insist on excellent performances in the UTME. The purpose of the UTME is for the kids to acquire the knowledge of all the topics in the UTME syllabus, as part of the kids preparation for the WAEC and subsequent international examinations. Our students complete this phase typically at age 16.

The second phase, international admission processing, starts immediately after WAEC. In a nutshell, best to submit completed applications to international universities no later than December, preceding the academic session being applied for. Accordingly, our students use the six months following the end of their WAEC to process their international applications for resumption in September of the following year.

Besides good WAEC and TOEFL results, many, not all, universities in the USA recommend applicants should take the SAT.

After acing the UTME and WAEC, to do very well in TOEFL, about a couple of weeks of specialised practice is all that is required, in our experience. Similarly, such student needs about two months of proper preparation to ace the SAT. We therefore recommend that our students take TOEFL and SAT no later than end of November preceding the academic session being applied for. That way all three results - WAEC, TOEFL and SAT would be available for them to successfully submit their applications no later than the end of December.

Accordingly, at age 17, they have a realistic chance of admission into international universities accepting applicants aged 17. Many international universities will still not admit a student under the age of 18. Regrettably, there is not much a kid intent to attend such universities can do than to wait until he or she reaches the appropriate age.

The above works perfectly well for most countries, with a few exceptions, which include the UK. Nearly all UK universities admissions are based on the A/L results. Thus a student intending to study in the UK will have to use the WAEC results to register for an A/L programme. Cambridge IGCSE or WAEC are equally acceptable for admission into A/L programmes.

Q: COVID-19 caused unprecedented disruption to school operations. How have you been coping?

A: Indeed, Covid-19 caused significant disruptions to the learning process of our students. Using Online learning tools, we worked with the parents and the students to salvage what we could from the remainder of the last academic session.

According to our calendar, our SSS3 students have no break between the Second and Third Terms. Despite Covid-19 school lockdown on Saturday 21st of March, these students resumed online on the Monday 30th of March.

The Online Term commenced for the rest of our student population on 4th of May. The Term's examinations were conducted in accordance with our original Third Term calendar, and concluded on the 26th of July.

Alhamdulillah, we were able to achieve our target for the session. We covered 100% of our syllabus for every subject, and for every class.

Q: Are you saying online classes can work as well as standard classes, with physical interaction between teachers and students?

A: Online Classes offer tremendous opportunities to reach learners all over the globe. It is undoubtedly here to stay.

However, Online Classes are not appropriate for everyone, in every situation, especially when we are dealing with children of secondary school age. The atmosphere at home, where the kid will be studying, has to be supportive, in order for the kid to get the best results possible. Specifically, the parents must ensure the kid will not be positioned to get carried away by the internet, Facebook, Instagram, YouTube, TikTok and a host of many other possible online distractions. Without the supervision of committed adults, an average kid has no ability to resist these temptations. The most important role of the adults is to ensure the kids have neither real online privacy, nor expectations of online privacy.

The last term was our first time holding a whole term online. Thus, we had significant room for improvement, many of which would be corrected today, if we are to do it over. Summarily, last term was also a learning opportunity for our teachers as well, and we took advantage of the opportunity.

One of the lessons we learnt was that we can actually have online extension classes for all our students. So, we allowed our students two weeks of Eid Break, and from Monday, August 10, we commenced our Online Extension Programme focusing on Mathematics, Arabic Language and Qur'an Memorisation. This online extension programme covers all our students except SSS3 and JSS3 that are preparing for their postponed final examinations the old fashioned way.

Another takeaway from the online term is our plan to introduce online programmes in Yoruba and Hausa Languages within 2020/2021 Academic Session. Our students and staff are Yorubas and Hausas from all over the country. Too many of the kids come to us not speaking their "native" languages. We are already experienced in handling kids who come to us not speaking the English Language.

Q: How has Covid-19 affected the conduct of your entrance examination?

A: Our entrance examinations have been online Computer-Based Test for five sessions. Since 2015, applicants take our entrance examinations from the comfort of their homes.

Our admission process has not change a bit. Applicants download the application form from alhijrahcollege.com, complete and submit the form electronically. Thereafter, our customer service representative would contact the parents to agree the dates and times convenient for the candidates to take the entrance examinations from the comfort of their homes while we monitor the examination process through online video in real time. The results of the examinations are released, and offer of admission made to successful applicants on the same day of examinations.

Accordingly, Covid-19 has had no impact whatsoever, on the conduct of our entrance examinations.

Q: How does your location, along the Lagos-Ibadan Expressway, affect your school operations?

A: We are 100% boarding. So our location is perfectly suited for the nature of our operations. We presently have a good number of our students from the FCT, all South Western States, and several other states, including Kaduna, Kano, Rivers, Edo, Kwara and Jigawa States. We also have students from Europe, America and Middle East, most of whom are coming into Nigeria for the first time.

We value the diversity of our student body which gives them an opportunity to learn about other people, countries, and cultures in a respectable manner.

So we go to great lengths to coordinate transport arrangements with parents to ease the movements of our students from any part of the world. We have a Liaison Office on the CMD Road, Magodo, Lagos where we pick up and drop most Lagos residents. We also pick and drop students at the airports, and bus terminals in Lagos and Ibadan. For instance, when the government announced school closure in March due to the COVID-19, we were able to conveniently get all our students to their respective homes before the commencement of the lockdown.

Wanted: Partnership for economic recovery

It's an open knowledge that the coronavirus pandemic has led to the deepest global economic crisis since World War II. As many as the world's 3.3 billion workers are threatened as orders dropped dramatically and supply chains broke down.

At the height of the lockdown, millions are left without any income. For 2020, there is a global consensus that a deep recession is in all continents from Asia to Europe, and from Africa to the Americas. And the recession won't go away in a few months until a vaccine becomes available. Even then the recession can only ease up, after many years.

The devastation of COVID-19 is better appreciated looking at the labour market figures in Nigeria, especially the unemployment figure. According to the National Bureau of Statistics, Nigeria's unemployment rate which was 23.1% in Q3 2018 is 27.1% as at the second quarter of 2020 indicating that about 21,764,614 (21.7 million) Nigerians remain unemployed. This confirms that unemployment increased by 4% points between then and the second quarter of 2020! Nigeria's unemployment and underemployment rate (28.6%) is 55.7% with all the negative impact on already negative productivity and worsening poverty!

The most affected are the people in the so-called informal sector, who already had to live from hand to mouth. Despite the curfews and lockdowns imposed in many countries around the world, they are unable to maintain social distance because of their living conditions. Hunger has increased worldwide as a result of the pandemic. Millions of day labourers fight for bare survival.

Many sectors were adversely impacted. For instance it is on record that half of the more than four million textile and garment workers in Bangladesh are on furlough or were dismissed. With gradual easing of lock downs, it can be said there has been a remarkable global partnership to save lives under the pandemic. Even in countries where some governments promoted false conspiracy theories about the virus, citizens rose in defense of basic rights to life and adequate medical care. It's time for similar solidarity and partnership for a possible post-pandemic recovery.

Nigeria needs harmonised monetary and fiscal measures to stimulate the economy and direct support or palliatives for the vulnerable. Happily there are significant stimulus measures led by the Central Bank of Nigeria (CBN) with complementary measures by the fiscal authorities notably Ministry of Finance. The bank sets out a number of measures to tackle the impact of the coronavirus. They include establishing a fund to support the country's economy (of N50 billion), targeted at households and micro and small enterprises.

Specifically On 16 March, the apex bank announced a year extension of a moratorium on principal repayments for its intervention facilities in sectors like rice and cotton cultivation. There is also a reduction of the interest rate on intervention loans from 9 percent to 5 percent. Then some N50 billion target credit facility for households, small and medium enterprises. There is an additional N100 billion intervention fund in healthcare loans to pharmaceutical companies and healthcare practitioners intending to expand/build capacity. N1 trillion in loans is also set aside to boost local manufacturing and production across critical sectors. There is also a provision of credit assistance for the health industry to meet the potential increase in demand for health services and products "by facilitating borrowing conditions for pharmaceutical companies, hospitals and practitioners".

Other fiscal measures include suspension of new electricity tariffs by the Nigerian Electricity Regulatory Commission (NERC) due to poor electricity supply, wide metering gap and the impact of the COVID-19 pandemic. The National Assembly recently commendably postponed the effective date of the new tariff to the first quarter of 2021. CBN has also restructured the loans of most states to provide support to help them settle their overdue salary and pension obligations to workers.

The drop-in commodity prices and resulting effects on government revenue led to a severe drop in the earnings of most states in the country. With all these measures, it is clear that Nigeria is not short of recovery measures. There is urgent need for a robust partnership between the government, organised private sector and organised labour to make sure the stimulus measures are delivered as promised; production is revived, the unemployed are engaged and those at work currently don't lose their jobs. Further are the interventions in the health sector yielding the desired results of equipped public hospitals. CBN's credit support facility for the health sector will definitely help pharmaceutical companies and healthcare to expand and build capacity for all times and for all diseases not just COVID-19.

But citizens must monitor the impact of the interventions and ensure they succeed. Why the massive retrenchment in aviation sector despite the promised support for the sector? As I have argued before, for those who care, the 11th CBN governor, Mr Godwin Emefiele, had long seen tomorrow, well before COVID-19. In promoting import substitution through development financing, CBN rightly removed some 43 imported goods from the list of items valid for Forex Exchange in the Nigerian Foreign Exchange Market. According to the circular, "importers who import these goods can no longer buy foreign currencies from the official windows (CBN, commercial banks) to pay their suppliers abroad. Rather, they will have to look for forex (dollars, pounds etc.) from the parallel market or Bureau De change to pay for their imported goods."

We must ensure that there will not be a return to business as usual with wholesale importation of what we can and must produce locally. More than ever before we should renew commitment to sustainable industrial policies, and the re-industrialisation. Happily, industrialisation is one of the remaining 9 point agenda of President Buhari in the next three years. CBN envisions through monetary policy and targeted development financing creating 10 million jobs in five years. Let other agencies such as NNPC, Nigeria Ports Authority make same commitments and soonest Nigeria can move from unemployment, underemployment to full employment.

Nigeria Amalgamation Document 1914

There is a posting with the above title that has surreptitiously been making the rounds in the social media. The posting alludes that some leaders of ethnic nationalities led by emirs and chiefs signed the document for the amalgamation of the northern and southern parts of the country in 1914. The posting starts with a seemingly innocuous question: 'Many Nigerians have asked if there were parties from the southern and northern protectorates that partook in the declaration of Nigeria, or did the British on their own sign the document in the absence of the people involved?' Then the document goes on to say that "these were the Nigerians present at the amalgamation: HRH Maiturare Sarkin Musulumi and Sultan of Sokoto, Usuman Dan Maje who later became Emir of Kano, Sir Kitoyi Ajasa a lawyer, HRH Oladugbolu Alaafin of Oyo, HRH R. Henshaw (Obong of Calabar), Abubakar Shehu of Borno".

Ever since the posting emerged, questions were asked if the document is authentic. I found it difficult to be categorical either way because the posting is not supported with an attachment of the authentic document. And in all my association with Nigerian history both as a subject of study in the classroom and of passionate pursuit, I have never come across this painted scenario. I reason that may be it is those vociferous advocates of restructuring on the basis of ethnic nationalities that are out to score a point in the quest to advance their narrative. No. They would need to do more than posting this unverifiable document. This is because from all available sources, Fredrick Lugard, then colonial Governor-General of Nigeria was always named as the sole architect of the amalgamation of northern and southern parts of the country to form a unified entity. The British as the colonial power didn't need the agreement of any ethnic group to make an administrative arrangement that they felt was convenient for them.

Most of the colonial administrators both at the centre and the regions left behind a memoir or a biography. Lugard left tons of documents. His wife Flora Shaw, reputed to have coined the name Nigeria, was an accomplished writer even before she married him in 1902. She had been the colonial editor of the Times and had a number of novels to her credit. The book she wrote on their stay in Nigeria, 'The Tropical Dependency', is one of the definite books on the early years of Lugard in Nigeria as High Commissioner of Northern Nigeria. He himself wrote the 'Dual Mandate' (1922). His biographer Margery Perham left us with two volumes of Lugard's biography 1956 and 1960, plus four volumes of his edited diaries published between 1959 and 1963. In all these and many other books by many writers, there had been no allusion to a meeting of emirs and chiefs to sign any purported document to amalgamate the northern and southern protectorates.

It is necessary to clear this issue now and declare that purported document going around as fake before some misguided compatriots start using it as a reference for calling a conference of ethnic nationalities to define our existence. We have seen how fake narratives get woven into truthful accounts and end up befuddling and contaminating worthwhile debates. What actually happened in that period, beginning from 1900, can be gleaned from plenty of sources. After the British have consolidated their grip they administered the territory from two ends: Lagos, capital of the Southern Protectorate and Zungeru, headquarters of the Northern Protectorate.

However, at a stage towards the end of 1911, for their own administrative convenience the British colonialists saw the need to administer the two territories as one and Lugard who had served as High Commissioner of the Northern Protectorate from 1900 to 1906 and was then stationed in the colony of Hong Kong as governor was tipped as the man for the job. He was returned as Governor of both the Southern and Northern Nigerian Protectorates in 1912 and was given the task to merge the entities into one. On arrival in Lagos he went to work at once preparing all the legal documents and in March 1913 returned to London to make his presentation to Whitehall. His proposals were accepted in September and he returned to Nigeria.

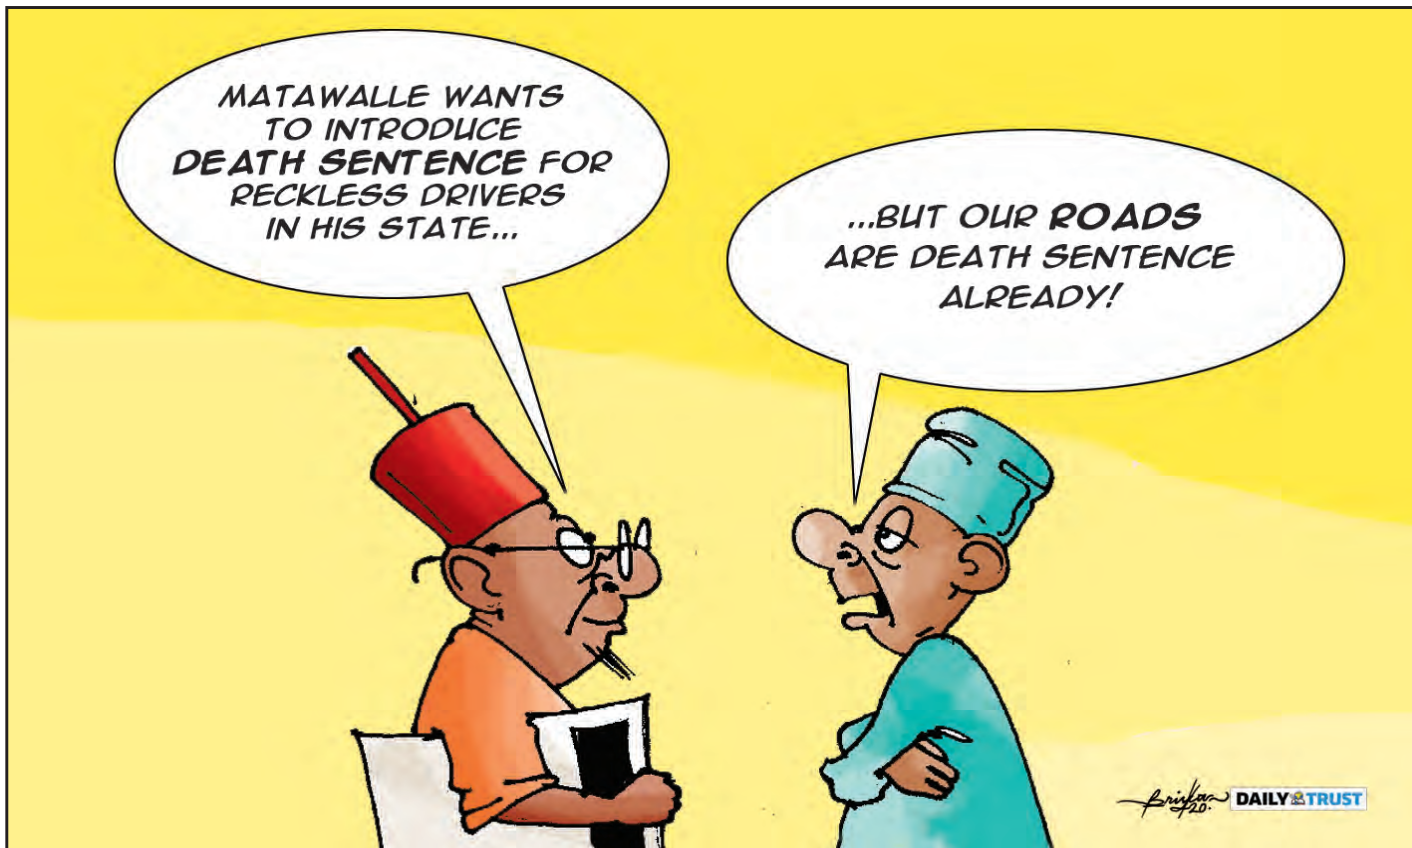

In January 1914 the new Government of Nigeria was so proclaimed alongside fitting ceremonies held simultaneously in Lagos and Zungeru, then the capital of Northern Region. The ceremonies in Lagos and Zungeru were to swear in the Governor, Fredrick Lugard and his lieutenants, Charles Lindsey for the north and Alexander Boyle for the south. The Lieutenant-Governors were to hold sway in the regional capitals. To commemorate the event a grand durbar was later in the year held in Kano where for the first time northern emirs and chiefs were brought together accompanied by a rich display of over 30,000 richly embroidered horses. Lugard later prepared a detailed report titled 'Amalgamation of Northern and Southern Nigeria and Administration 1912-1919' which he submitted to the British Parliament.

The story of leaders of ethnic nationalities signing amalgamation document in 1914 is a hoax. It is now what is referred to as fake news.

Answer the simple question Fani Kayode

Section 39(1) grants every Nigerian the freedom of expression, including to hold opinions and receive and impart ideas and information without interference. Equally, section 22 bequeaths the media with the constitutional right, AT ALL TIMES, to hold government and every individual accountable to its responsibility to the people.

As a Nigerian citizen and journalist, the Daily Trust reporter has both individual and institutional constitutional rights and duty to hold persons of public interest accountable. Fani-Kayode is no longer a public office holder, but he is going round states to inspect projects to hold state governments accountable.

This is a matter of public interest. So, why denigrate a journalist and stop him from doing his job, instead of answering the simple question?

After two decades of democratic experiment, Nigerians have come to realise that a lot of our politicians are self-centred and never do anything in the public interest, except there is a benefit for them somehow. So, the journalist only wanted the public to know who is footing the bills of Fani-Kayode's project inspection round the states. If he is the one, he should state so. We need to know.

The reporter has done nothing wrong and Daily Trust should be proud of its reporter for asking such an important question, out of the many who attended that press briefing.

Fani-Kayode's outburst simply points to the fact that he is hiding something and Nigerians deserve to know the truth on why he is going on the inspection trips and where the funds are coming from, and why now? Fani-Kayode never engaged in such private inspections of public projects in his time in government, when he had all the public resources at his disposal? So, that is a question that he should answer.

In the public interest, a journalist can ask every and all question, and uncover whatever someone is seeking to hide, so long as it is in public interest. So, no, Fani Kayode, there are no "stupid questions" in journalism. So, what the Daily Trust reporter did is in order. Not even the president is exempted from public scrutiny by the Constitution of the Federal Republic of Nigeria, except immunity from legal proceedings. So, if the number one citizen is not exempted from being held accountable, no one can be exempted.

Anyone who watched the two minutes plus footage of the scene knows that Fani-Kayode is hiding something; and he does not want anyone to know who is sponsoring his trips. Why? That is another question he would have to answer.

And it is an insult for Fani-Kayode to think that all journalists at the press conference were there for pittance "brown envelopes". That was why he accused the Daily Trust reporter of being paid to ask the question. Well, the Daily Trust journalist has shown that not all journalists who attend press conferences are there for brown envelopes and that some are actually there to do their jobs. And I know many who do not, and will never accept gratifications, before or after doing their jobs.

Shamefully, some of the journalists at the press conference could be heard apologising to Fani-Kayode. For what, except for Fani-Kayode's insinuations to the "brown envelope" and it appears that they were afraid that his anger will cause them to lose whatever pittance there is to get from the trip. I know many people will be disappointed at that aspect, especially journalists with an altruistic passion for the job, and those who hold journalism in high esteem, and as a public trust.

All said and done, it is Fani-Kayode who should apologise. He should answer the simple question and tell Nigerians where the funds are coming from and why he is going round states inspecting public projects at this time. The NUJ must take strong measures to avert such attacks on press freedom and to the Nigerian journalists.

Buhari govt must leave agric revolution propaganda

The Media Advocacy West Africa Foundation (MAWA-Foundation) calls on president Muhammadu Buhari's government to leave its agricultural revolution propaganda and confronts the reality of food scarcity and high cost of food in the country and address them as they are leading to a near acute hunger in the country.

MAWA Foundation frowns at the Buhari government's attitude of pushing the campaign of food sufficiency and agric revolution when in reality there is a huge shortage of food high cost in the market across the nation.

Buhari government has over the last five years claimed to have achieved agricultural revolution and food sufficiency; this is not true as the reality in Nigeria at the moment shows that never in the history of our country did the citizens experience this kind of high cost of food and food scarcity.

We wish to remind the Buhari government that a bag of rice now sells for N30k across the Nigerian states while in some states it is higher.

Garri that is always regarded as food for the poor is no longer affordable with All Farmers Association of Nigeria (AFAN), warning that there will be a scarcity of commodity because cassava farmers have since abandoned their farms.

Should the Buhari government does not know, many farmers in Nigeria, particularly in the northern part of the country have since abandoned their farms as a result of insecurity because they being killed in their farms either by bandits or herdsmen.

We call on the Buhari government to immediately forget about the energy it puts in pushing the propaganda about agric revolution as his core achievement and begin to address food scarcity and the high cost of food, which has become a major dent to his administration.

Niger needs FG's help

The state of road infrastructural decay in Niger State has reached an alarming stage. These FG roads include (1) Suleja--Minna, (2) Lambata-Lapai-Bida. (3) Minna-Tegina-Mariga-Kontagopra. (4) Minna-Kataregi-Bida. (5) Bida-Zungeru (6) Kontagora-Bokani-Mokwa. The only fairly good roads leading in and out of the state are Suleja-Sabon Wuse-Kaduna, Bida-Mokwa-Jebba, which are also facing serious threats now as a result of heavy-duty vehicles plying them 24 hours daily. Niger state and its people, therefore need urgent FG intervention to rehabilitate all or some of the listed roads.

That intemperate gaffe by Fani-Kayode

A strong lesson in maintaining decorum in encounters with the public, especially the media, was delivered last week in Calabar, Cross River State, to the iconoclastic politician Femi Fani-Kayode.

In a development which has gone viral, he had invited the press to promote public projects executed by some governors in the course of a good governance tour. Typical of a dutiful reporter, Eyo Charles, representing Daily Trust, had asked Fani-Kayode who was bankrolling the project inspection enterprise. From then on, the parley took a dramatic turn with Fani-Kayode losing his temper and raining expletives as well as threats on the reporter.

While the specific contents of the vitriolic-laced hate speech which Fani-Kayode launched at the reporter are trending in the media, he has since expressed remorse and apologized, as well as recanted his hate-laced expletives, apparently in submission to the massive wave of condemnation and recrimination which his conduct at the fora had attracted.

Among the trending concerns of public interest in the saga are at least four.

Firstly, is the propriety of the question – whose ostensible aim was to clarify the source of funds for the project inspection exercise, as it had been running largely unknown to the general public. Given his present status as a private citizen who is bereft of any known, relevant official designation, or even endowment that qualifies him to inspect public projects and pontificate on their integrity, his compatibility for the task remained questionable in the public eye.

Specifically, it is in the public interest to clarify whether taxpayers' funds were involved. And it is in this context that the modalities pertaining to his involvement in the exercise remain a matter of significant public interest. The question is also without prejudice to his profile in the public space as a vociferous iconoclast, as well as current travails, courtesy of his ongoing prosecution by the EFCC for corruption in office, while serving as minister of Aviation.

The question of who was bankrolling him was, therefore, most expedient as it was intended, in one vein to open to the public insights into the financial aspect of the largely nebulous project inspection exercise, while also offering him the opportunity to endear himself as a public-spirited Nigerian, whether sponsored or otherwise.

That he failed to answer the question remains a negative for him as it deepened the mystery surrounding the financial aspect of the project monitoring exercise.

The second aspect of public interest was the commendable courage and comportment with which the reporter asked the question and remained calm as well as composed all through the excoriation by Fani-Kayode. His disposition in the face of the attack on his person provides an eloquent testimonial to the reportorial culture by the Daily Trust stable which upholds the imperative of its operatives deploying wit, courage and discretion, creative approaches to isolate facts from fiction, in their reportage.

So also was the response of the Daily Trust management which aligned with the ethos of credible and responsible journalism to commend and defend the reporter. The gesture of the management of the newspaper towards the reporter qualifies to serve as a beacon of encouragement to media practitioners who may find themselves confronted with a similar situation where misplaced impunity tends to vitiate the course of public interest.

Thirdly is that his temperamental outburst at the press conference venue and latter show of remorse, including his admission of discretion-deficit as well as self-excoriation, point to a syndrome more insidious than is casually considered in many opinion circles across the country.

Viewed against a fall back to several instances in the past where the said Fani-Kayode was involved in speech and or conduct that was unbecoming of a prominent political figure, provides a disturbing situation that questions his discretion in evaluating public sensitivity to his persona and actions.

Fourthly, was the show of solidarity with the Daily Trust stable by the country's media establishment and a wide cross-section of public opinion circles. This support points to the huge potential for change in the country's political fortunes when and if the media takes its proper place as an agenda-setting facility to move Nigeria to the next level.

Yobe @ 29: Thoughts on our democratic journey

By Abdullahi Bego

Let me commend the civil society here in Yobe State for its hard work and dedication to the ideals of a better, more peaceful society. In ways large and small, the civil society is helping to make our democracy stronger and more diverse.

It is argued that democracy is the best system of government ever invented by man. As a government of, for, and by the people, democracy offers a chance for us all to freely elect our leaders, to demand that those leaders do right by our votes, to hold our leaders to account and to make our voices heard.

This is the point to which I want to turn my attention – how democracy has worked for us here in Yobe since the state was created 29 years ago, and how we might work, as citizens, to make our democracy work even better, and make it more enduring, more resilient, and more reflective of our collective aspirations as a people.

As you know, here in Yobe State, as in other parts of the country, we practice representative, as opposed to participatory, democracy. Each time we reach for the ballot and elect a local government chairman, say, or a member of the state assembly, or a governor, conferring on them the mandate to make decisions on our behalf according to the constitution as we regularly do every four years since 1999, then it is representative democracy in action.

But don't get me wrong: Representative and participatory democracy are not mutually exclusive. Insofar as it refers to the participation of people in the political, democratic process and in civic engagement, participatory democracy can exist side by side with representative democracy. Through public hearings as occasionally called for by the legislature, and through rallies, and protests, and through the media, for example, citizens always have the opportunity to crowdsource their opinions for elected officials and contribute directly to the decisions that affect their lives. That is participatory democracy!

Looking back, it is now 21 years since the return of democratic rule in the country – 21 years of continuous opportunity to regularly renew our trust in our leaders. There is no question: Democracy has worked for us fairly well here in Yobe State over these two decades.

The institutions of our democracy – the legislature, the judiciary, media, law enforcement, civil society; all these are fully deployed in the service of the people. On its part, the executive branch of the government continues to work even harder to provide basic social services that the people need and that make the society grow stronger, including clean water, affordable healthcare, education, support for agriculture and food production, and security. This is true across all civilian administrations in the state.

Governor Mai Mala Buni has now taken this to a whole new level. The governor is not only making our democratic institutions grow stronger; he is not only opening new frontiers in social service delivery; he is, significantly, opening up the democratic space to more young people than ever before, youths that were largely disaffiliated from a chance to discover and deploy their fullest potentials in the service of society.

Today, thanks to Governor Buni's effort, the Yobe State government is buzzing and humming with a young and active middle management team, which is doing the state proud with its energy, its enthusiasm, its talent, and its drive for excellence. From the State Emergency Management Agency (SEMA) to the State Scholarships Board, to the SPHCMB, to a slew of other new agencies, such as the focal office for the NEDC created to more positively impact the lives of the people, these young, active individuals are helping to write a new chapter in the annals of Yobe's public service.

These are significant markers of progress. These are significant milestones for how our democracy has fared over the recent period. Subject to data and statistics, I dare say that the Buni administration has opened up the political space to more young people than any other state administration in the current dispensation in this part of the country.

But there is still more work to be done, as the room for improvement is the biggest space in the world. More work to do for the schoolgirl in Dokshi and the schoolboy in Dapchi who dream to become a doctor or a nurse practitioner, a teacher, or an engineer and is so blissfully excited about what life has to offer. More to do for the young electronics vendor at the Bayan Tasha market or the local GSM market and hundreds more like him who have the energy and the drive and the will to make a difference in their own lives but needed just a little push to turn their dreams into reality.

Our governments here in Yobe State have always strived to provide this opportunity. Governor Mai Mala Buni is currently striving hard to do more and to expand opportunities. Each moment in our history has its twists and turns. But for over 21 years now, our long democratic journey, in my opinion, has been a story of steady upward movement.

As citizens, we all have obligations to make this journey a little livelier, a little more spirited.

As civil society, your first obligation is to continue to work to ensure that we have a well-informed electorate because a well-informed electorate speaks to the capacity of people to exercise their franchise more beneficially. Walter Cronkite, a celebrated former journalist, once said that "our democracy cannot function without a reasonably well-informed electorate".

The media has a special obligation in this respect. It is to report the news fairly and accurately, to not be involved in sensationalism, and to avoid racing to get the story first in favour of getting it right.

This last point, the one about getting the story right, is particularly important. In the age of social media when most people get their news online from the comfort of their phones, we have to especially work to avoid trumpeting stories that are unverified or that are outrightly false. Fake news fuels conflicts. We must continue to contribute to peace-building by striving to avoid it.

Second, remember that famous line from John F. Kennedy, "Don't ask what your country can do for you, ask what you can do for your country"? Yes, I know many of you do. That's a call to action, a call to citizenship. For if we want our democracy to work as well as it should, each of us must dig in and roll up our sleeves. We must participate in the political process and live up to our civic responsibilities. As someone noted, "Democracy is not (always) about what can be done for us, it is about what can be done by us together through the hard and frustrating but ultimately necessary work of self-government".

Third – and lastly – let each of us be guided by those universal values that we all cherish – the values of honesty, and industry, and tolerance. Throughout history, every society that has prospered or that declined did so partly on the basis of whether these values were upheld and respected or whether they were disregarded and kicked down the road.

NDE takes 100% control of 774,000 jobs - DG

● 40,000 pilot scheme in 8 states successful

The Director General of the National Directorate of Employment (NDE), Dr. Nasiru Ladan Mohammed Argungu, said the agency has taken over the full control of the Special Public Works (SPW) programme meant to engage 774,000 young people across 774 local government areas.

In an interview on Sunday, Dr. Argungu said, "The fact is that now the execution of this project is 100 percent in the hands of NDE, and we have set the machinery in motion.

"An agreement was reached and I want you to put it on record. The agreement was reached by the DG of NDE, the Permanent Secretary in the Ministry of Labour and Employment, the Minister of State, Festus Keyamo and the Minister, Chris Ngige. The decision was taken by four of us that NDE as the implementing agency should go ahead to implement and execute this programme," Argungu said.

He revealed that within the week, the NDE team from the head office, with the team from the minister's office will be touring some states "to ensure that all arrangements are in order so that we can meet the October 1, 2020 deadline as the take-off date for this programme."

The NDE boss said the agency has enough human capacity and facilities to handle the programme. "Before this 774 project, we had 691 desk officers out of the 774 local government areas but as I speak, we have desk officers in all the 774 LGAs. Our staff strength is almost 3,000, enough to cater to a lot of activities."

The NDE head noted that while the SPW programme is ready to take off on October 1, 2020, a pilot study was conducted across eight states by engaging 40,000 people was successful.

"Of course, from the breakdown I gave you, it is something we can handle 100 percent. We have done pilot studies in eight states – Ebonyi, Edo, Kwara, Ekiti, Borno, Katsina, Adamawa and Jigawa. We have not done in Adamawa and Jigawa because of the COVID-19 issue, but all arrangements are in place. For the six states, we have done it successfully."

Dr. Argungu also said the programme has six key objectives. "It is far beyond that. As far as NDE is concerned, the government is trying to use one stone to kill six birds.

"The first point is that you are much aware that even in developing nations, their economy is driven by micro economy. Think about N52 billion going into the grass roots at LGA, ward level and unit level. Micro economically, what it will do to our economy is that it will have a direct impact on our macro economy."

Secondly, he said it is creating jobs at the grass root, minimising rural to urban migration. Thirdly, President Muhaammadu Buhari has directed that wherever there is gathering of over 100 youths, NDE should engage a local preacher to emphasise to the youths in their local language about the importance of living in peace and harmony with self-reliance.

Fourthly, NDE's department of Small Scale Enterprises has Basic Business Training (BBT) unit that will sensitise participants about investing part of their N60,000 stipends to improve their businesses or farm

There is also the fifth aspect of community supervision where NDE officials will be enlightening the beneficiaries about guiding the critical governments' infrastructures in their localities.

The sixth point is to engage the beneficiaries after the three months as Agricultural Extension Workers (AEW). "We have a programme in NDE under the Rural Employment Promotion (REP) department called Sustainable Agricultural Development Training Scheme (SADTS) where young people are trained on modern agricultural skills. So we are going to train most of them in this area as agricultural extension workers."

He said NDE studies show that there are vast fertile lands across states where farm practices can be enhanced. Dr Argungu also noted that in states like Osun, Oyo, Ogun and the rest, with N100,000, one could hire one hectare of land for maize farming with a profit margin of N125,000.

"The Gombe State governor, Muhammadu Inuwa Yahaya, visited NDE recently because he has the idea of engaging 10,000 young people across the 11 LGAs in Gombe State."

On the implementation, he said, NDE was deploying three staff in each LGA to add to three LGA monitoring committees and the three-member state implementation committee to ensure everything is in order. He said forms with security features have been printed and given to banks for applicants to collect without any cost.

Screened applicants will get their accounts linked to the Special Public Works (SPW) account. "If they don't have, we will make arrangements with banks with wide reach because nobody would need to leave his locality."

Allaying fears of sabotage, he said all interests have been carried along as 400 of the slots will take care of that per LGA. "The remaining 600 spaces are open to all Nigerians. Once you are 18 years and above and unemployed, you are qualified to join this programme. Some degree of disability can be allowed to be engaged in this programme.

"One other clarification is that, neither the leadership of the Senate nor the House of Representatives, not to talk of any lawmaker, has ever spoken to me about slots on this project. So the issue of the National Assembly members trying to hijack this programme, honestly, it is not true," he clarified.

Speaking of the reforms at NDE, Dr. Argungu said he streamlined 81 trade trainings to 15. "Between 2014 and early 2017, which is about three and half years, only 14,082 people were trained by NDE. I assumed office on April 18, 2017, and from that time till date, and with the adjustment we made, we have already trained 1.6 million people. In this year, we are laying more emphasis on resettling more trainees."

Reps to summon foreign shippers over 400% hike in container surcharge

By Chris Agabi

The House of Representatives is making a move to summon the European Community Ship Owners Association on a recent hike in Peak Period Surcharge (PSS) on containers billed for Nigeria, the House Committee Chairman on Ports and Harbour, Hon Datti Garba

Mohammed, has said.

The PSS was $200 but jerked to between $1,000 and $1,500 per container, a situation that has drawn outrage from importers.

Speaking exclusively to our correspondent in Abuja, Hon. Mohammed said the 400 percent PSS hike by the foreign shippers on goods headed to Nigeria was illegal and against the agreement earlier entered into with the Union of African Shippers Council.

"We are in the midst of COVID-19 which has impacted the economy of the whole world. Suddenly, the European Community Ship Owners Association just imposed a unilateral increase in surcharges which they called peak season surcharge.

"This surcharge is about 400 percent increment. This is aside from other charges that exist. This was done unilaterally, without consulting their host, the Nigerian Shippers Council and other authorities that have to do with that."

He said the economy will be deeply affected due to loss of revenue and inflation from the high cost of the imported goods.

"So as a parliament, we feel the peak season surcharge is illegal. We have written to all the shipping companies operating in Nigeria. We are inviting them to come and explain the rationale for the unilateral increment."

CEO INTERVIEW

Why credit bureau penetration still at 14% - Dr Popoola

From Risikat Ramoni, Lagos

What is your assessment of loan performance in recent months?

The last few months since March have witnessed significant disruptions. COVID-19 which erupted late 2019 in China became a pandemic and Nigeria was not exempted. At the moment, most businesses operate in a skeletal form.

On the CRC database, we have over 36 million credit files and a significant number of consumers and businesses are still honouring their obligations. However, some financial institutions have gone ahead to extend loan repayment schedules and advances to assist borrowers keep up with their repayments and this has greatly helped the consumers maintain their favourable credit scores.

Recently, the Central Bank of Nigeria released a report to the effect that about 32,000 facilities from 17 commercial banks have been reported to have been restructured on the request of the borrowers.

Essentially, loan performance is going to be adversely affected but it is too early to predict the magnitude. What is apparent is that some sectors are more affected than others, so, loans to operators in the most hit sectors would be highly affected.

What is the importance of credit information report to loan assessment process?

The credit information or credit report is one of the important factors that lenders look at before approving any loan application for an individual or business. The credit information report essentially contains a borrower's credit history and other relevant information that enable scientific evaluation of the creditworthiness of a borrower. It will show if you have been paying back those loans, defaulting, or have defaulted in the past. This information is used to determine how risky it is for a lender to extend a loan to an individual or business entity.

What is the current rate of subscription to the credit bureau?

The current rate of subscription to credit bureau has improved but is still below the expected when compared with other credit-based societies. The data base of CRC Credit Bureau has over 36 million records from over 1,500 subscribing institutions made up of all commercial banks, specialised development banks, microfinance banks, mortgage banks, finance houses and other financial institutions licensed and supervised by the CBN.

However, there are other data furnishers such as the telecommunication companies, electricity distribution companies,

Dr. Ahmed Tunde Popoola is the Managing Director and Chief Executive Officer of CRC Credit Bureau in Lagos. In this interview, he gives reasons why firm credit penetration has not gone beyond 14% and how this can be pushed up.

■ MD/CEO, CRC Credit Bureau, Dr. Ahmed Tunde Popoola

pharmaceutical companies, cooperative societies, real estate firms, etc. But credit bureau penetration is still incredibly low in Nigeria at about 14 per cent because there is a very low level of credit penetration.

Despite the seemingly current heavy lending by financial institutions to individuals and businesses, the level of credit penetration in the country is still below 30% which is below the African average of 57%.

How has the credit bureau assisted lenders and borrowers?

For lenders, the credit bureaus provide the information that helps them make informed lending decisions. Lenders can pre-qualify borrowers and reduce their risks. We assist lenders in the entire value chain of lending by providing information that enables them to scrutinize the marketplace for good potential borrowers; profile loan applicants to determine their credit worthiness, monitor loans after they have been granted, help in mitigating defaults and delinquencies and manage bad loans for recoveries.

We assist lenders to lend based on facts and to price based on risks inherent in a borrower. In addition, credit bureau services assist lenders to avoid haphazard selection.

For borrowers, credit bureau services make it easy for credible borrowers to have access to credit at competitive interest rates and with considerable reduction in the demand for collateral for borrowers with good credit history and good credit scores.

What sectors should rely on the credit bureau services?

According to the Credit Reporting Act of 2017, Section 7, a credit information user may only seek information from a credit bureau for certain permissible purposes which include, considering an application for credit, carrying out employment checks, among others.

What this law highlights is that, various businesses in different sectors of the economy can use information in the credit bureaus and if you run a business that offers credit or post-paid options to your customers, then you need the credit bureau. Virtually all sectors where loans are granted, or services are rendered through post-paid arrangements or products delivered on credit need credit bureaus.

What should people know about credit risk management?

It is important that individuals and organisations appreciate the financial intermediation role of financial institutions. While banks want to lend, they want to do so safely and minimise losses. Invariably, they will always put a robust credit risk management process in place to ensure that only credible individuals and organisations that have the capacity and the willingness to repay loans have access to loans.

There would always be consequences in the form of penalties for defaults, translating to higher charges or inability to access credit in the future.

As an individual, you should understand the credit risk process, so you can better manage your financial status and know what will happen when you apply for a loan and the steps you need to take, to get your loans approved.

Is there a law compelling subscription to credit bureaus?

The National Credit Reporting Act 2017 makes it compulsory for lenders generally to subscribe to the services of credit bureaus. The CBN also mandates all lending institutions under their licensing and regulatory regimes to furnish data and access credit bureau for lending and know your customer (KYC) purposes.

However, the value that credit bureaus deliver to the economy is compelling enough for any organisation to utilise its services.

AMCON assets now N136.73bn - Kuru

By Victoria Onehi

The Managing Director/Chief Executive Officer of Asset Management Corporation of Nigeria (AMCON), Mr Ahmed Lawan Kuru, has said AMCON's assets under management is now N136.73 billion.

Kuru said this when he led the management of AMCON to appear before a technical session of the Senate Committee on Banking Insurance and other Financial Institutions in Abuja at the weekend.

"In spite of all the challenges and frustrations, which have been heightened by the ravaging pandemic, the corporation is not deterred because as at August 2020, AMCON's assets under management (AUM) amounted to about N136.73 billion, while the agency has about N112.03bn worth of proprietary assets," Kuru said.

In a statement, AMCON said the committee met to review the impact of COVID-19 on its policies and process with the view to reposition it for optimal performance amidst the pandemic.

Kuru the Senate needs to do more to support AMCON recovery as some of the top obligors of AMCON still hide under legal technicalities to tie down AMCON in courts.

Chairman of the committee, Senator Uba Sani, assured that the committee and AMCON have identified the strategies being employed by debtors to stall the repayment of loans, including dragging court cases for many years.

"The Assets Management Corporation of Nigeria has remained at the receiving end of these well-laid and orchestrated acts of economic sabotage," he said.

What we must do to overcome economic decline - Don

From Clement A. Oloyede, Kano

A professor of economics at the Bayero University, Kano, Garba Ibrahim Sheka, has advised the government to abandon fire-brigade approaches if it is sincere about diversifying the economy and getting Nigeria out of its worst economic decline in 10 years.

In an interview with Daily Trust, Professor Sheka, said Nigeria cannot restrict the blame of the present situation to the COVID-19 pandemic because "there was also negligence on the part of our leaders to put the economy into a sound base."

"Even without COVID-19, we were in trouble. Unemployment was so serious and the major approaches to address it were not adequate.

"Rather than give one million people temporary jobs that will last one year or some months, it is better that you give 300,000 people permanent jobs because the temporary jobs can end up causing problems," he said.

While emphasizing the need for permanent solutions, Prof. Sheka suggested "sincere diversification of the economy", which he said would involve "spending huge amounts of money which the government is claiming not to have.

"If you want to diversify through agriculture, you need to come up with infrastructure that will support irrigation. If you want to diversify through the industrial sector, you have to provide power, roads and railway networks."

He also suggested a downward review of the rate of interest to encourage investors.

"The Central Bank of Nigeria has been trying but they have to do more. The rate of interest, their Monetary Policy Rate must be reduced this time around. The cost of capital is so high and if we are sincere with our diversification, we have to encourage investment and to do this; you have to do something about the interest rate," he said.

Ogun grants 50% discount on land use charge

From Peter Moses, Abeokuta

The Ogun State Government has granted investors a 50 percent discount on all year 2020 land use and amenities charge paid by September 30, 2020.

The State Commissioner for Industry, Trade and Investment, Mrs. Kikelomo Longe, stated this during the 15th Quarterly Stakeholders Engagement meeting between the state government and members of MAN, Ogun State branch, held virtually.

Mrs. Longe said, the state inaugurated the Ogun State Business Environment Council, to "focus on sustainable reforms to address constraints impeding the ease of doing business in the state and limiting effective private sector participation."

The Chief Economic Adviser and State Commissioner for Finance, Dapo Okubadejo, said, "Taxpayers, who pay their land use and amenities charge between October 1 and 31, 2020 would enjoy 25 per cent discount, while payment made between November 1 and 30, 2020 would attract 10 per cent discount."

Chairman of the Association, Mr. Seleem Adegunwa, lauded the ministry for providing support for manufacturers in the state, as well as acting promptly towards addressing their concerns.

Data protection industry created 2,700 jobs, worth N2.5bn - NITDA

By Zakariyya Adaramola

Over 2700 jobs have been created in the new data protection industry worth N2.5 billion in one year, the National Information Technology Development Agency (NITDA), said.

The Director-General of NITDA, Kashifu Abdullahi, at the weekend, said the agency had issued supplementary regulation in line with the National Digital Economy Policy to strengthen the Nigeria Data Protection Regulation (NDPR).

"Our innovative way of implementing the data protection regulation has, in turn, resulted in the creation of more than 2700 jobs and industry worth more than N2.5bn within a year", Abdullahi disclosed.

He said NITDA had also inaugurated the Data Breach Investigation Team in collaboration with the office of the Inspector General of Police (IGP) to track and report data infraction cases to police.

"So far this year, we have resolved over 790 data regulation issues", he said.

He also disclosed that NITDA had set up three IT hubs, four innovation and incubation parks, six IT community centres and three IT capacity-building centres in higher institutions as well as in unserved and underserved communities across the country.

SMEs urged on planning to survive COVID-19

From Sunday Michael Ogwu, Lagos

The Vice President, Business Development (West), Sigma Pensions, Mrs. Mabel George has urged Small and Medium Scale Businesses (SMEs) to leverage technology as well as imbibe good financial planning to survive the economic downturns of COVID-19 pandemic.

George said this over the weekend at the ConnectNigeria Virtual business fair where thousands of SMEs converged to learn, connect and showcase their business.

She also urged businesses present to re-evaluate their business propositions to adapt to the changing business environment and practices in order to survive the pandemic and its aftermath.

She said: "You need to rethink the way you do business, you need to take a back seat to review the economy and sectors and see how you can add a positive stint to what is going on in the economy."

"Most importantly financial planning is the key tool every business owner, young professional or any individual at all must imbibe. Put your finances together," she said.

George further advocated the need to adapt to technology and leverage on to move forward.

She also on SMEs to learn how to gather and use data as well as a diligent financial planning

"Data is king, with the right data we are able to predict, make simulations and are able to plan how we are going to work and how we are going to function during and post the pandemic. Data gathering puts you in a better standing compared to people who do not work with data."

FG wants ITF skills programmes harmonised

From Dickson S. Adama, Jos

The federal government has directed the Industrial Training Fund (ITF) to harmonise all skills development initiatives by Ministries Departments and Agencies (MDAs) across the country as enshrined in the ITF Act.

The directive, which was via a virtual meeting of critical stakeholders and partners in skills acquisition was chaired by the Vice President, Professor Yemi Osinbajo.

Osinbajo said the harmonisation will help to achieve greater success in Technical and Vocational Education and Training (TVET).

Speaking after the meeting, the Director-General of the ITE, Joseph Ari, promised to swing into action at once in order to implement the directive of the vice president to harmonise technical and vocational skills training in the Nigerian economy as enshrined in the ITF Act.

The DG stressed that with greater support from government, the current challenges of limited funds, high costs of TVET training and wrong perception of TVET education could be surmounted.

The ITF-NECA TSDP is a skills acquisition programme that started with just six trade areas at its inception but now boasts of over 40 trade areas with over 8,000 youths trained annually for the industries.

SON certifies LPG plants in Kano

From Richard P. Ngbokai, Kano

The Kano state office of Standards Organisation of Nigerian (SON) has commenced testing and certification of Liquefied Petroleum Gas (LPG) plants across the state with a view to ensuring that standards are maintained in the business for public good and safety.

This follows the acquisition of a mobile pressure machine by the organisation in its bid to ensure that safety of the public is not compromise in setting up the gas plants.

Speaking to reporters while flagging off the exercise on the newly installed AMMASCO gas plant in Kano, the state coordinator of SON, Malam Yunusa Mohammed, underscored the need for all gas plants in the state to be duly certified.

He said preparations have been concluded to embark on mass monitoring and testing of the plants across the state in order to ensure compliance to safety standards.

'We raised DStv, GOtv rates after market review'

By Simon Echowofun Sunday

MultiChoice has said its price adjustments on some DStv and GOtv packages from September 1, 2020, was done after careful consideration of the market and a review of its business operations.

In a statement, the firm said: "We have reviewed the prices of some of our bouquets so that we can continue to survive as a business and bring quality entertainment to our customers." It said it considered inflation rate at 12.82%, the highest in 27 months; content costs and efficiencies within the company. "Please, be assured that we have worked hard to keep this year's tariffs manageable," said John Ugbe, CEO of MultiChoice.

It said the packages will continue to be available at varying pricing points to allow subscribers flexibility in price and choice without compromising quality or variety.

NPHCDA's Last Game Strategies that Kicked Polio out of Nigeria

By Hussein Mohammad

The slogan, 'Kick Polio out of Africa' was borne in 1996 when polio cases in Africa hit an all-time high, paralyzing over 75,000 children yearly and the late South African President, Nelson Mandela, responded by launching a massive campaign against the disease. Launched in collaboration with Rotary International and other partners, the crusade marked the beginning of a cross-continental movement against polio and the slogan soon assumed a popular catchphrase internationally.

Nigeria, which at the time had a large share of cases of the disease, was not left out; it also quickly keyed into the renewed global push by rephrasing the slogan to 'Kick Polio out of Nigeria' and redoubling its efforts in line with the soccer mantra. The National Primary Health Care Development Agency, NPHCDA, which is saddled with the responsibility of providing technical support to states, local government areas and other stakeholders in the functioning, planning, implementation, supervision and monitoring of PHC services, strategized accordingly.

Factors militating against the polio fight were so numerous and herculean that despite the efforts, the country seemed to stagnate and soon gained the ignoble distinction of being the only one in a continent of 54 countries and one of the only three countries (alongside Afghanistan and Pakistan) in the world, yet to be certified polio-free. The main challenges included cultural and religious sentiments. Some religious and traditional leaders openly opposed the immunisation campaigns on the ground that it was a western ploy to make people infertile. This misconceived sentiment, which was more pronounced in the northern part of the country, became a source of serious concern, thereby deepening the challenge in reaching millions of children for vaccination. The Boko Haram insurgency in the North and the consequent insecurity equally constituted a clog in the activities of the vaccinators who moved from house to house, to vaccinate.

Daunting as these problems were, however, NPHCDA clung to its guns, determined to actualize the slogan, 'Kick Polio out of Nigeria'. Consequently, the last four years witnessed renewed efforts, reinvented strategies and winning innovations. First and foremost, plans were drawn up to improve the quality and better coverage of immunization activities.

In the special case of insecurity, the Agency adopted special approaches, one of which was the engagement of the Military and Civilian Joint Task Force, CJTF, to provide access information and security escorts for vaccination teams in security-compromised areas. In this regard, the Agency developed and implemented Standard Operating Procedures (SOPs) for systematic engagement of the Military and CJTF. The CJTF members, who are usually based in the communities and are familiar with the local terrain and security situation, help especially in escorting vaccinators to the remote areas. Another strategy, Reaching Every Settlement, RES, was initiated and implemented in inaccessible settlements, especially in Borno State. The initiative, generously supported by partners, involved detailed consultative planning with stakeholders at local government area level and rapid vaccination visits, depending on the security situation on ground.

To address the political, religious and cultural sentiments against immunization activities, targeted communication strategies were employed to overcome the barriers. There was consistent re-orientation of health workers, adhoc personnel and policy makers towards the need for community involvement. Effective advocacy to politicians and community leaders, as well as massive social and community mobilization were deployed at national, state, local government down to grassroots levels. Hence, community participation was so improved that gaining the confidence of caregivers became a matter of course. Local government chairmen and community leaders were so carried along that they participated in Evening Review Meetings, where issues relating to non-compliance were discussed and subsequently resolved.

International border activities were another challenge. It is interesting to note that Nigeria has as many as 16 states, 60 LGAs and 201 wards along the international border. The situation contributed greatly to the persistence of the Wild Polio Virus in the country, as the virus kept circulating across the borders. For instance, the confirmation of polio outbreak in August 2016 revealed that the virus had long been circulating between Borno State and Chad Republic.

With such glaring evidence of the effects of a porous border, the Agency decided to intensify cross-border collaboration to increase population immunity in communities along the nation's borders. To achieve this, all major crossing points along the international borders were mapped with geo-coordinates obtained and permanent border transit points, vaccination teams stationed at strategic crossing points to immunize children entering and departing the country. To evaluate the effectiveness of the strategy and develop further tactics that might be necessary, the data generated were reviewed weekly at the National Emergency Operations Centre, NEOC. Also, during Supplementary Immunization Activities, SIAs, inter-border synchronization meetings were held and attended by officials from neighbouring countries, with the discussions at meetings culminating into joint plans and synchronization of vaccination sessions by teams from both countries.

Other frontline strategies employed to tackle the disease were enhancing the quality of Supplemental Immunization Activities (SIAs), strengthening Acute Flaccid Paralysis (AFP) surveillance and stepping up routine immunization. To improve the quality of SIAs, house-based micro-planning were developed to find missed children and settlements, while nomads were included in vaccination teams for easy outreach to nomadic populations. Furthermore, focused and effective mop-up activities were regularly carried out in special areas. While improved SIAs ensured full coverage, strengthening of AFP surveillance ensured timely detection and response to polio cases, whereas routine immunization exercise ensured continuous attention to vaccination at Primary Health Care facilities.

In addition to strengthening the existing operational structures, NPHCDA under the leadership of the Executive Director/CEO, Dr. Faisal Shuaib, also embarked on initiating organizational frameworks to complement the structures, for better results.

The supportive innovations are quite numerous. The major ones include the National Emergency Routine Immunization Coordination Centre (NERICC). The innovation was an offshoot of the Agency's official declaration on 17th June 2017 of a state of public health concerns on the alarming number of unimmunized children. The declaration was aimed at re-launching, rebranding and rapidly revamping the Routine Immunization performance in the country, with NERICC as a major vehicle through which quick results could be achieved.

The emergency centre, established with a direct reporting line to the office of the ED/CEO, was saddled with the specific tasks of planning, coordinating and ensuring the country's national target of 85% coverage for routine immunization was achieved and unvaccinated kids were reached through innovative strategies within the shortest possible time. Functioning as the governing arm for routine immunization programmes and projects within the country, the Centre provided a national and sub-national coordination mechanism to manage the full implementation of the routine immunization programmes, strategies and other recommendations of various expert committees towards achieving the targeted routine immunization coverage for all antigens at national, states and LGAs levels.

For effective operation, the centre is structured on three tiers; at the national, state and local government levels. Hence, we have the National Emergency Routine Immunisation Coordination Centre (NERICC), the State Emergency Routine Immunisation Coordination Centre (SERICC), and the Local Government Area Emergency Routine Immunisation Coordination Centre (LERICC).

Another major supportive operational structure innovated under the leadership of Dr. Shuaib, is the National Emergency Maternal and Child Health Intervention Centre (NEMCHIC). It is a national coordination centre that provides oversight on reproductive, maternal, newborn, child and adolescent health and nutrition activities at Primary Health Care and community levels.

The Center was similarly established on 8th April 2019 following a declaration of state of public health concern on maternal and child health in Nigeria by the Agency. Just like NERICC, NEMCHIC operates across the recognized administrative levels in Nigeria – national, state and local government area levels. At the state level, it is called State Emergency Maternal and Child Health Intervention Centre (SEMCHIC), while at the local government level, it is called Local Government Emergency Maternal and Child Health Intervention Centre (LEMCHIC). As obtains in the case of NERICC, the three tiers work in collaboration to achieve the set objectives.

The Community Health Influencers, Promoters and Services (CHIPS), is another important programme that has contributed to the success of the fight against polio in Nigeria. Officially flagged off by His Excellency, President Muhammadu Buhari on February 6th, 2018, the programme is aimed at tackling the country's poor maternal, newborn and child health indices by developing strategies to improve the situation and speed up progress towards Universal Health Coverage (UHC).

In specific terms, the programme is designed to improve on the village health worker concept established by the NPHCDA and endorsed by the federal government. It is structured to motivate and support households in communities to seek and obtain primary health care services through interventions at the community-level. In short, it is aimed at reducing barriers to access by taking services closer, particularly to pregnant women, women of childbearing age, newborn and children under-5 years old.

Through the aforementioned strategies and innovations, and the others, NPHCDA under the leadership of Dr. Faisal Shuaib, was able to not only stop the Wild Polio Virus in its tracks but kick it out of Nigeria. With no case detected in three years, the country was eventually removed from the list of polio-endemic countries by the independent Africa Regional Certification Commission for Polio Eradication (ARCC) and subsequently declared polio-free.

As implied by the Executive Director on several occasions, though the tasks of achieving the feat appeared concentrated around the NPHCDA, the fact is that many legs were actually involved in kicking polio out of Nigeria. According to him, the huge financial commitment by the federal government and partners were largely responsible for the accomplishment. In his words, "One of the most crucial elements of the polio eradication strategies in Nigeria is the political commitment at the highest level; from the President of the Federation to State Governors and Traditional and Religious Leaders... The significant contributions of WHO, development partners, and the Global Polio Eradication Initiative (GPEI), a public-private partnership leading the effort to eradicate polio, has helped greatly in achieving this glory."

As Nigerians celebrate this rare feat of kicking the dreaded disease out of Nigeria, it should be noted that many unsung heroes were involved in the fight. Above all, Dr. Faisal Shuaib's sense of leadership and creative innovations must equally be recognised as the hot key that generated the actions culminating to this moment of glory.

This Is Sheer Stupidity!
Dad dangles son over edge of a cliff to 'get a perfect snap'

Terrifying footage shows the moment a reckless dad dangled his young son over the edge of a mountain road as family members stop to take pictures. The disturbing clip was captured by bewildered tourists visiting the steep winding mountain path of Hongjing Road in Beijing, China on Monday. The father is captured holding his helpless young son by both arms as the boy dangled over the steep edge of the road. The child places both feet on the vertical concrete wall and looks towards the sheer drop beneath him (photo right). Other tourists, including adults and children from the same family, watch but do not intervene in the potentially fatal photo stunt. The dangerous stunt has since been viewed more than 13 million times since it was shared weekend. It is unclear whether local authorities will issue a fine to the father.

Kaduna to provide cheap housing through partnership

From Faruk Shuaibu, Kaduna

The Kaduna State government has reiterated its commitment to providing cheap and affordable housing through Public Private Partnership (PPP) initiatives.

Executive Secretary of Kaduna State Mortgage and Foreclosure Authority Yahaya Aliyu Lere stated that the government has initiated policies that allowed the less privileged to own houses in the state.

The secretary, who made the remark during a courtesy visit by members of the Nigerian Institute of Estate Surveyors and Valuers (NIESV), Kaduna branch, said with the PPP, the government has provided hectares of land to private developers who have assured on affordable housing for residents.

Firm launches real estate marketplace game in Nigeria

By Terkula Igidi

Reality Games, a London-based gaming company, has launched one of its games in Nigeria, attracting over one million players in less than a week.

According to John Woznowski, the CEO of Reality Games, the augmented reality game called Landlord GO, has become a top app in Nigeria with more than one million players.

“Right now in Lagos, there are 13,588 players making deals for virtual ownership of the 534,765 real properties. Landlord GO is a geo-location reality game that lets players buy and sell real-world properties,” he said in an email sent to Daily Trust.

Additional information on the website of the company indicated that the game helps players explore a worldwide property market with the aid of GPS where real-life maps (Foursquare, Google and NASA data) appear showing properties in different locations in the world.

The game also has an agent feature which allows a player to hire an agent who will scout for properties worldwide and provide the best deals.

from land, it would provide infrastructure like roads, electricity and drainage, stressing that the agency was established to finance obstacles that property developers might face.

“We are not into financing development of properties but to finance obstacles of housing even if it is a single unit; so long as the necessary requirement can be met.

“Also, there is an ongoing mortgage scheme that allows civil servants or those in the formal and informal sectors to own their houses and over 200 people have applied,” he said.

He further stated that through the federal government’s economic sustainability plan in constructing over 300,000 houses across the country with Kaduna getting 10,000 housing units, a sub-committee has been formed for early preparation and seamless implementation of the project.

ESV. Olunmi Ogundiya, the Kaduna Branch Chairman of NIESV, praised the state governor for being the first state to establish a Mortgage and Foreclosure Agency in the country.

He stressed the need to integrate local professional estate surveyors from the onset of planning and design of houses as they know the demography of the state.

KANO STATE GOVERNMENT

Congratulations on your re-election!

Dr. Akinwumi Adesina
President, African Development Bank

I, Dr. Abdullahi Umar Ganduje OFR, the Executive Governor of Kano State, on behalf of the government and good people of the state, felicitate with Dr. Akinwumi Adesina on his re-election as the President of African Development Bank for a second term.

We are indeed proud of you as you are reelected into this prestigious position, which is a clear testimony of your proven hard work, dedication and commitment to the development of not only the AfDB but Africa as continent and humanity in general.

As a former minister of Agriculture and former Vice President of the Policy and Partnership for the Alliance for a Green Revolution in Africa (AGRA), we are confident and optimistic that you will use your vast experience and knowledge to transform the lives of Africans through AfD's programmes and policies during your tenure.

As I congratulate you once again on this monumental feat, I wish you God's guidance in the discharge of this important responsibility and other endeavours.

Signed:
Dr. Abdullahi Umar Ganduje OFR

El-Rufai commends Agwatyap's peace initiative in Zangon Kataf

Governor Nasir El-Rufai has commended His Highness, the Agwatyap, Chief Dominic Gambo Yahaya, for bringing together the diverse communities in his chiefdom to begin the rebuilding of trust and restoring peace.

The governor gave the commendation when a delegation of Atyap Chiefdom visited him at Sir Kashim Ibrahim House, to formally update him on the peace summit which was held penultimate Saturday, where Atyap, Hausa and Fulani communities resolved to live in peace.

Governor El-Rufai also called on "every person of goodwill to support the Atyap Chiefdom's strong efforts to bring its communities together and stop the bloodshed and destruction of property.

"Everyone should reject the temptation to take laws into their hands and instead submit all grievances to the lawful authorities," he further advised.

According to him, government "commends the resolve by the communities to respect the right of any citizen to live in peace within the Atyap Chiefdom and applauds the resolution to settle disputes through lawful processes and institutions."

El-Rufai noted that what the communities and leadership of Atyap Chiefdom have started is the type of grassroots ownership of the responsibility for peace and harmony that the government has advocated.

According to Governor El-Rufai, this kind of initiative is more beyond the deployment of police and military forces.

The governor appealed to all the communities to abide by the resolutions of the summit with vigilance and commitment, and work towards making it a sustainable accord.

"The work of peace is often hard, but it is an obligation to work always for preserving human life, liberty and livelihoods," El-Rufai explained.

The governor reiterated that "this strong community rapprochement will help to complement security efforts to restore law and order and advance towards sustainable peace."

El-Rufai said that his administration "has been clear and insistent since 2015

■ (Fourth from left) Governor Nasir El-Rufai receiving a copy of the Peace Agreement from His Highness, Agwatyap Dominic Gambo Yahaya, where Atyap, Hausa and Fulani communities in Zangon Kataf local government, resolved to live together in peace.

that the ultimate guarantee of peace is the willingness of communities to live in peace and harmony, and their resolve to settle all differences by strictly lawful means."

He said government welcomes "the unequivocal repudiation of the violence and killings that have occurred in the Atyap Chiefdom, and the call on all residents of the area to report to the security agencies, the criminals that have perpetrated the lawless acts in the area."

El-Rufai promised that all those "who seek to replace violent strife with harmony can be assured of the unstinting support of the state government for the peace and concord in all our communities."

The governor commended "the involvement of youths from the various communities in the peace summit and their agreement not to mount roadblocks anywhere in the chiefdom."

According to him, government will maintain the enhanced security deployments in the area as this peace process advances, adding that "Kaduna State Peace Commission will also strongly support this effort at building peace at the grassroots."

The governor promised to accede to the Agwatyap's demand to construct the road linking Ungwan Wakili to Kwaku and Gora, as well as build the road linking Zango, Tangje and Ungwan Jaba, including Zango Urban roads. He also promised to construct a bridge linking Gidan Zaki and Manyi Aghui.

He argued that although the projects fall within the purview of Zangon Kataf local government, the state government will nonetheless execute them, owing to the Agwatyap's leadership role in initiating peace in his chiefdom.

Speaking earlier, the Agwatyap thanked Governor El-Rufai for giving support for the successful hosting of the summit.

His Highness revealed that the idea of the summit was mooted a long time ago, adding that he approached the governor about the proposal four weeks ago for consultation.

According to the Royal Father, the governor not only welcomed the idea but suggested some names of stakeholders that the Agwatyap should involve in the summit. Chief Yahaya said that he met with the people who also bought the idea of the summit.

He said that the resolutions of the summit has been captured in a 14-point agreement, which the representatives of the Atyap, Hausa and Fulani communities signed.

Emulate Agwatyap, Deputy Gov advises monarchs

■ Deputy Governor of Kaduna State, Dr Hadiza Balarabe with the Agwatyap, His Highness Dominic Yahaya Gambo at his palace at Zangon Kataf

By Peter Ibrahim

The Deputy Governor of Kaduna state, Dr Hadiza Balarabe has called on traditional rulers to learn from the initiative of the Agwatyap, His Highness Dominic Gambo Yahaya, for holding a peace summit in his chiefdom.

Dr Balarabe who gave this advice when she visited the traditional ruler in his palace at Zangon Kataf, also praised the peace summit, where the Atyap, Hausa and Fulani communities committed to living peacefully.

The Deputy Governor advised that "traditional rulers at every level should learn from what has happened here, to initiate this kind of process because we need to come together and break down those walls, so that we can talk to ourselves, so that we can understand that our diversity should be the source of our strength."

"For me this is just the beginning and I am sure that all other traditional leaders everywhere are already thinking of how to do this. This peace initiative which has been started, needs to be sustained so that we will consolidate and make progress," she said.

Dr Balarabe who was accompanied by senior government officials, also condoled the traditional ruler and his people over what she described as needless killings and destruction of properties, which have hampered development and progress.

Responding, the Chairman of Atyap Traditional Council, His Highness Yahaya, noted that the agreement is just the first step, as all parties need to work harder to actualize peace.

The Agwatyap also advised the state government to support the traditional institutions in southern Kaduna to mobilise and start holding this kind of dialogue and efforts towards peace building.

Electronic voting: Our success story in Kaduna State – SIECOM Chair

The Chair of Kaduna State Independent Electoral Commission (SIECOM), Dr SARATU BINTA DIKKO AUDU is first amongst equals, having successfully held the only technology-driven election in Nigeria. In the interview below, she spoke about how she conducted the first electronic voting in the country.

By Kamaldeen Aliagan

Kaduna State pioneered electronic voting in Nigeria two years ago. In retrospect, what motivated the State Independent Electoral Commission (SIECOM) to chart that course?

When we came on board as a commission, Governor Nasir Ahmad El-Rufai told us that he wanted electronic voting to be used, he wanted technology to be introduced to the voting process and elections. At that time, we thought that all he meant was for us to use the Smart Card Reader that had been used for national elections. So, we thought that he wanted us to use it at the local government level. But he said no, he wanted to go all the way. He wanted people to vote electronically, and technology should be deployed in the election. We took up the challenge and began to look at what kind of machine do we develop that will serve us during the local government election. We did a little research, looked at what was happening around the world, what other countries were doing, especially those that have gone electronic. We developed our own model of what we wanted to use and that was how we came about the Electronic Voting Machines that we used in the 2018 election.

Which specific country did you use as a model, in your effort to reinvent the wheel, by starting electronic voting system in Nigeria?

We didn't choose any particular country, we looked at the deployment of technology in voting in various countries, we looked at the United States and we looked at Brazil; Brazil being a third world country like us. We know that other countries also use electronic voting. In Africa, Mozambique was the first country to deploy technology to that level in their election. So, we looked at what Brazil has done, which was at that time on the same economic scale as Nigeria. Of course, the United States is way ahead of us. So, we looked at what will work for us. It's a very simple machine.

Some lawyers said that you broke the law by using electronic voting to conduct the election. According to them, neither the 1999 constitution nor the Electoral Act permits the use of electronic voting. Did your action have any legal backing?

We didn't break the law, we worked perfectly within the law. The constitution allows states to determine the method of election at the local government level and I believe those lawyers know the constitution very well. On the basis of that, we went to the state House of Assembly to seek for a law to be formulated to enable us use technology and the electronic voting machine in our election. So, we didn't break any law; we were perfectly within the law. I'm sure our governor will not allow us to break any law.

Considering the fact that the Electronic Voting Machine (EVM) is a new technology, coupled with the low literacy rate in our society, was enough time provided to demonstrate how the Electronic Voting Machine works?

We gave a lot of time for sensitization. We did sensitisation at the state, local government and ward levels without the Electronic Voting Machine. We did another sensitization at state, local government and ward levels with the EVM. We allowed people access to the EVM for three days in every ward, for them to try it out, play around with it and see how it works. Like I said, it is a very simple machine; voters were very excited about the EVM. We under rate Nigerians but Nigerians are very intelligent people. Nigerians are so intelligent that even a grandmother in the village operates a smart phone and that is as simple as the machine is. All you need to do is press buttons.

After the elections, we conducted a survey of people throughout the state, to get their reactions on the EVM and elections in general and the results were positive. We are in the process of publishing the result from that survey. Majority of the people said that the use of the machine made the election much easier and credible than the use of ballot papers. Towards the next elections, we are going to take the machine out so that voters can refresh their memories on how the machine works and how it is operated. We will give them another chance to play around with it and a chance to play around with the new things we added to the machine.

Before coming to the new features that have been introduced, what is the step-by-step process that a voter will follow in order to cast his or her vote?

The first thing you do when you go to the polling unit where you are registered, is to bring out your Permanent Voter's Card. The electoral officers will cross check your name with the voters list pasted on the wall, to confirm that you actually own that card and you are actually registered at that polling unit. If you go to the wrong polling unit, you will be directed to where your polling unit is. After you have been cleared, you will proceed to the voting machine. The presiding officer will activate the machine which will open to a page, where we have all the political parties that are registered to participate in the election displayed. The first page is for the chairmanship election.

So, you will just touch the screen where you see the logo of the political party of your candidate. Once you touch the screen, the machine will then enlarge the logo, so that you can see clearly to confirm that it is the party logo of your candidate. There are two little buttons on the machine, a red and a green one. The green button is the "okay" button; you press it if it is the party you want to vote for. But if, for some reasons, you press the wrong party, then you cancel by pressing the red button and it takes you back to the home page. If the voter completes the process successfully, the machine generates a receipt on the left hand side of the machine. So, you can see if the receipt that carries the logo of the party that you actually chose. If it is not the same logo, you can then raise an alarm. This is actually to confirm to you that the logo or party that you selected is what the machine printed.

That receipt drops into the ballot box underneath the machine. That is the receipt that can be used as a tally later, if there is any contention. If that happens, you can open the box and count all the receipts. For every vote, a receipt is generated, so we can use it to check. And once you finish voting for the chairmanship, a new page opens for the councillorship election. You follow the same process. Afterwards, the machine closes and you can't vote again until the presiding officer activates it for the next voter. So, that is as simple as it is.

What new features do you plan to introduce on the machine for subsequent elections? For example, will it include accreditation of voters electronically?

That will be the ideal situation, that is what we will like to do. But to be able to do that, the Independent National Electoral Commission (INEC) that owns the voters register, has to allow us access to the data on an electronic format. We are currently working on that process with INEC at the moment. However, there are security issues connected to that because the PVC has sensitive details of individuals on it. And we don't want to end up in court (laughter).

What will you say are the gains of the Electronic Voting Machine over the manual ballot box method, apart from ease of use and being fool proof?

In a democratic government, people need to believe in their election managers that their votes will actually count. The electronic voting machine gives them that proof. They see what they have selected. At the end of the election, when you close for the day, the machine will generate a receipt, giving a summary of the activity on that machine. That summary will show you the number of votes that every party got. That summary is printed and in the last election, ten copies of that summary were printed and shared to all the security agents and party agents. If you say that you don't believe in the summary of votes, we will open the machine, sort out the receipts manually and count. We did that several times with stakeholders. So electronic voting gives people the confidence that their votes will actually count.

Apart from that, we have a server that captures the votes real-time and that server will confirm the numbers that you get from the field. But I don't think that there is anything that beats the fact that there, where the election was held, you take back a receipt showing the number of people that voted for you. And if there is any contention, you can bring out that receipt and confirm. So what else do people want? Secondly, it is much faster; the whole process, from checking your name on the displayed voters list to actual voting, took less than three minutes for each person in the last election. So people are much more comfortable with that.

In terms of cost, is it cheaper to procure these machines or to produce ballot papers and vote manually?

I have not done the ballot paper elections before; I have only done the electronic. Initially, electronic voting is more expensive because of the hardware but the machine can take you through three elections. The amount of money we spent last time, will reduce the next time we hold elections. So, in the long run, it is cheaper. The fact that elections are supposed to reflect the desire of the people, when you can accomplish that, then you have got your money's worth. That is why the electronic voting is better than manual voting.

There is also the quantity of things that you are moving around. For each polling unit, you have one machine, whereas if it is manual voting, you will be carrying boxes of ballot papers along with you, and some may fly away somewhere (laughter).

Has any state approached you to learn from the Kaduna state experience, being the first to use the Electronic Voting Machine?

All State Independent Electoral Commission in the country belong to a forum. We took the machine to that forum and it was well received. A number of states have approached us. But you know, that kind of bold decision is beyond the chairmen of electoral bodies, it belongs to the governors. It takes a proactive governor and a governor with guts like Malam Nasir Ahmad El-Rufai to be able to do that; to say let the people choose who they want. So, it depends on the governor.

We have met with INEC officials over electronic voting and they have seen our machines. We are talking with governors at the forum level. But like I said, it takes a bold governor to be able to do that. We must commend our governor because he is someone that wants things to be done the right way, through electronic voting. Whoever wins, takes the prize.

Have you gotten accolades, commendations or awards for pioneering this novel idea, whether nationally or internationally?

During our last election where the EVM was deployed, we had international observers. Yes, we got reports from them that commended what we have done and a number of them promised to reach out to us before the next elections commence. Our effort has been highly commended by international organizations. You know, Nigeria is the first country in West Africa to deploy electronic voting and there are some reports that said that that at the local government level, this is the first time it is being done worldwide. People have tried it at state level but at the local government level, this is the first time that it is being deployed.

'In a democratic government, people need to believe in their election managers that their votes will actually count. The electronic voting machine gives them that proof. They see what they have selected. At the end of the election, when you close for the day, the machine will generate a receipt, giving a summary of the activity on that machine. That summary will show you the number of votes that every party got'

KADUNA FACTS

- Kaduna state is the first sub-national to conduct electronic voting in Nigeria, when it held local government election on May 12, 2018;
- The State Independent Electoral Commission (SIECOM) procured 6,000 Electronic Voting Machine (EVM), even though they were 5,739 voting units in the state;
- The state assembly passed the Kaduna State Independent Electoral Commission Bill number 10 of 2012 into law, allowing the use of EVM, on February 6, 2018;

- Prior to the election, EVMs were taken to the 255 wards in the state, for a three-day sensitisation campaign.
- Electoral officers and ad hoc staff were also trained on the use of the machine;
- On election day, voters were accredited manually with their Permanent Voters Cards (PVCs);
- Afterwards, they voted the political parties of their preferred candidates, by pressing the appropriate icon on the EVM screen;

- A receipt or slip is generated after each voting process is completed, showing the choice of the voter;
- Simultaneously, the EVM transmits results to a monitoring room at the commission's ICT centre. The results are saved on a server;
- At the end of the exercise, the slips or receipts are counted before party agents, security agents and electoral officials, at the polling unit;
- The printed slips or receipts should tally with what is recorded on the server to make the results valid.

THE FIRST SCIENTIFIC CONGRESS OF THE WEST AFRICAN POSTGRADUATE COLLEGE OF MEDICAL LABORATORY SCIENCE AND INVESTITURE OF FELLOWS

Keynote Address by the Director-General of WAHO, Prof Stanley Okolo FRCOG, PhD 22 February 2020 | Sheraton Hotels, Lagos, Nigeria

- Honourable Minister for Health, Federal Republic of Nigeria;
- Members of the Diplomatic Corps;
- Excellences here present;
- President of the West African Postgraduate College of Medical Laboratory Science;
- Officers and Members of Council of the College;
- Other Postgraduate Colleges present;
- Distinguished invitees;
- Members of the media;
- Ladies and Gentlemen;
- All protocols observed;

I bring you Greetings from the President of the ECOWAS Commission, His Excellency Jean-Claude Kassi Brou, and from the West African Health Organization (WAHO) and we are happy and truly honoured to be associated with the 1st Scientific Conference of the West African Postgraduate College of Medical Laboratory Science holding here in Lagos.

I wish to take this opportunity to sincerely thank His Excellency Muhammadu Buhari, President of the Federal Republic of Nigeria for authorizing the organization of this important conference in Nigeria.

Honourable Minister; Your Excellencies; Ladies and gentlemen;

Forty years ago, 134 countries pledged to assure "Health for All" by the year 2000. They failed to deliver on that pledge. Today, at least 400 million people have no access to basic medical care, and 40% of the world's population lacks social security protection.

Health is a human right. Humanity's failure to provide Universal Health Coverage (UHC) is a violation of this right and must be addressed as a top priority. This can only happen when the ability to detect illnesses and outbreaks is made an integral part of it. Medical laboratory science provides clues that are key in the diagnosis and treatment of disease or injury, and laboratory professionals are one of the major detectives of the healthcare world.

Medical laboratory professionals perform complex tests on patient samples using sophisticated equipment like microscopes. They perform chemical, haematological, immunologic, histopathological, cytopathological, microscopic, and bacteriological diagnostic analyses on body fluids such as blood, urine, sputum, stool, cerebrospinal fluid (CSF), peritoneal fluid, pericardial fluid, and synovial fluid, as well as other specimens. Medical Laboratory Professionals work in clinical laboratories at hospitals, reference labs, biotechnology labs and non-clinical industrial labs.

The data they find plays an important role in identifying and treating cancer, heart disease, diabetes, and other medical conditions. It is estimated 60 to 70 percent of all decisions regarding a patient's diagnosis, treatment, hospital admission, and discharge are based on the results of the tests Medical Laboratory Professionals perform.

They provide clues that are key in the diagnosis and treatment of disease or injury and assist in the maintenance of healthy lifestyles. Clues to solving the mysteries of diseases are found in our own bodies. Laboratory tests monitor the composition of our blood, urine, and other body fluids and tissues for early warning signs of disease. Laboratory professionals perform tests that are crucial to our health and well-being. Although they spend less time with patients than physicians and nurses, laboratory scientists are just as dedicated to patients' health. As vital members of the healthcare team, they play a critical role in collecting the information needed to give the best care to an ill or injured patient. They find great satisfaction in their work, knowing that they are helping others and are saving lives.

It is the medical laboratory professional, who measures blood cholesterol and blood sugar, tests for anaemia, checks the urine for protein, identifies strep throat bacteria, prepares blood for transfusion, and even determines if a hit and run driver was under the influence of alcohol or drugs. Medical lab professionals work in hospitals, clinics, forensic or public health laboratories, as well as pharmaceutical industries, biotechnology companies, veterinary clinics, or research institutions. Depending on the setting, their work hours may vary; but typically laboratories are run 24 hours a day, seven days a week. Medical laboratory professionals spend the majority of their time on their feet, analysing test results in the lab.

Medical laboratory professionals work in many settings: hospitals, clinics, research facilities, public health centres, the Armed Forces, veterinary offices, colleges, business, and industry. Academic achievements and technical ability set the level for responsibility one reaches in medical laboratory science.

These laboratory professionals are responsible for performing routine as well as highly specialized tests to diagnose and/or aid in the treatment of disease, troubleshooting (preventing and solving problems with results, specimens, or instruments), and communicating test results to the pathologist and the physician.

They also play the main role in procuring vaccines and cures for lifethreatening epidemics by working with organizations such as the Centres for Disease Controls, referential research centres and the World Health Organization. The work done by a clinical laboratory scientist is so important and essential to the world of medical science.

Laboratory information enables physicians, pathologists and other healthcare professionals to make appropriate evidence-based diagnostic or therapeutic decisions for their patients. Clinical laboratory services are the most cost-effective, least invasive source of the objective information used in clinical decision-making. Laboratory tests are often part of a routine check-up to look for changes in your health. They also support medical doctors to arrive at accurate decisions in diagnosis of illness and medical conditions, evaluate treatments, and monitor the spread or progression of infection.

Honourable Minister; Your Excellencies; Ladies and gentlemen;

The theme of this congress "The Role of Medical Laboratory Professionals in the Successful Implementation of Universal Health Coverage in the ECOWAS Region" is very apt.

The role of Medical Laboratory Professional in Universal health coverage (UHC) has been at the forefront of the global health agenda for several years, with renewed enthusiasm following the issuance of the Sustainable Development Goals in 2015. Universal Health Coverage has been defined by the World Health Organization (WHO) in 2010, as "ensuring that all people have access to needed health services (including prevention, promotion, treatment, and rehabilitation) of sufficient quality to be effective, while also ensuring that the use of these services does not expose the user or the patient to financial hardship".

Since one of the goals of Universal Health Coverage is to reduce the financial hardship associated with healthcare, it is expected that, regardless of the quality of services in a system, high costs of care are being reduced. A key indicator to consider is the incidence of catastrophic spending. Yet, even in the face of the global momentum and political commitments to UHC, the incidence of catastrophic Out-of-pocket payments spending globally has actually increased since 2000 at all household expenditure thresholds.

Out-of-pocket payments are defined as direct payments made by individuals to healthcare providers at the time of service use. They primarily serve to sustain the provision of health services, creating perverse financial incentives.

A 2009 Rockefeller Foundation report indicated that this type of spending is "the most inequitable and inefficient form of financing for healthcare, leaving patients" without access and further impoverished. Moreover, relying on high out-of-pocket payments, regardless of income level, violates the spirit of UHC by driving people into poverty and can make the achievement of effective UHC impossible.

For most people without access to such insurance schemes, high out-of-pocket expenses mean that families must provide a large sum of money (relative to their incomes), using multiple avenues, before accessing care. In some parts of the world, requirements for out-of-pocket payment deviate so completely from any type of functioning financial system that they lead to detention in the hospital of patients unable to pay, with an appallingly negative impact on the quality of care received. For example, it has been reported in 2017 that in the Democratic Republic of the Congo (DRC), approximately 54 percent of mothers at one healthcare facility were detained after failing to pay medical fees for giving birth. Although they may receive care, these patients are detained for weeks or even months afterward, without continued care, food, or even a bed. The factors contributing to the practice are multifaceted, complex, and not easily resolved without dedicated resources and political leadership.

A cornerstone of UHC should be to end patient detention, but doing so is not a simple task. There is the need for a strong political commitment into the national health accounts system and also strong mechanisms should be put in place for a working health insurance schemes in our region.

Honourable Minister; Your Excellencies; Ladies and gentlemen;

As countries make progress toward universal health coverage and design and deliver their essential health benefits packages, diagnostics must be included as a key component of such packages. This is because most diseases or conditions cannot be correctly managed without a clear diagnosis. High-quality health care begins with seeking care, followed by a diagnosis that leads to appropriate therapy.

Individual disease and outbreaks cannot be stopped or restricted if the cause is not identified early.

When diagnostics are not acknowledged as an essential component of the healthcare system, they get little attention, budget, and support for implementation. If tests are not explicitly listed in national health plans or benefits packages, there is no mechanism for procurement, supply, and reimbursement. The consequences of underinvestment in diagnostics and laboratories are clear. The laboratory infrastructure in most low and middle-income countries is very weak. Even basic tests are missing in many health facilities. In a study of 10 countries in sub-Saharan African in 2017, only 2% of healthcare facilities had the ability to perform eight basic tests — for blood glucose, haemoglobin, malaria, urine dipstick for protein and sugar, HIV, syphilis, and pregnancy. In the absence of laboratory support, healthcare providers have no choice but to resort to empirical and syndromic treatment.

Similar cascade-of-care analyses for HIV, hepatitis C, hypertension, and prevention of mother-to-child HIV transmission have each shown big gaps at the diagnosis stage. The consistency of diagnosis as a key gap across disease areas and settings is quite remarkable and underscores the chronic neglect of diagnostics and laboratories in most low- and middle-income countries.

To address this massive gap, countries need to invest in a sustainable, connected, integrated laboratory networks, procure quality diagnostics, and train laboratory professionals to assess results. We must reject the mind-set that simple, rapid tests and syndromic treatments are "enough for poor countries." All patients, rich or poor, deserve to know their diagnosis.

At this juncture, as we commend the giant stride in the inauguration of this college today, I want to charge every medical laboratory professional serving in one capacity or another to rise up and meet up the requirements and expectations of the college. They must come up with pragmatic research findings that would proffer some solutions to the incidence of emerging and re-emerging diseases in the ECOWAS region, they should collaborate and work together with other health professionals to provide a total one health to the ECOWAS population, noting fully that "the health of man is the health of all". They should not see the establishment of the college as a jamboree or an avenue for confrontation and unfounded acrimony with other members of the health team. To whom much is given, they say, much is also expected.

Honourable Minister; Your Excellencies; Ladies and gentlemen;

Nigeria and other African countries should intensify efforts to make medical laboratory services accessible through public-funded health insurance schemes, as the countries move towards universal coverage of health services. With a strong political will, the combination of diagnostic capacity, access to essential healthcare services will become available in low and middle-income countries like ours.

I want to use this forum to appeal to development partners to collaborate with government of Member States and especially the West African Postgraduate College of Medical Laboratory Science and other similar postgraduate and research institutions to carry out further specific researches on arresting the progressing cases of emerging and re-emerging diseases like Coronavirus, cancer and neglected tropical diseases in order to reduce the case fatality rate of this disease conditions.

The West African Health Organization at our own level will continue to be proactive and working with different organizations and partners to implement the decisions of the ECOWAS Heads of State and Government on all health matters in the region including training, capacity development and research on providing access to treatment of all emerging and re-emerging diseases and health conditions.

In conclusion, I would like to extend my sincere gratitude to the Honourable Minister of Health for his support to WAHO, and to all those who have contributed, directly and indirectly to the organization of this important Congress.

Thank you! Merci! Obrigado!

Signed

Driver, assistants rescued as truck crashes into building

By Adam Umar

A driver and his two assistants whose truck crashed into a three-storey building at the weekend, have been rescued alive in Madalla town of Niger State.

It was gathered that the truckers were coming from Kaduna and heading to Zuba, when the driver tried to dodge a vehicle at the scene of a similar truck crash last Thursday that was yet to be evacuated, but lost control. They crashed into the building which was only some metres away from Zuma Rock, on the Abuja/Kaduna highway.

A witness, Abel Ebere, who lives in the building told City News that he was woken up by the noise of the crash, which occurred around 6am on Saturday.

He said he rushed from the first floor, where he stayed, to the scene where he saw the crashed truck and bags of sachet water scattered on the ground.

"I later learnt that the water sachets were from a pickup van which the truck driver had tried to avoid," he said.

The Head of Search and Rescue Operation, of the National Emergency Management Agency (NEMA), Abuja, Labaran Ahman, said on arriving at the scene, they found that the truck driver had been rescued by by-standers and the agency conveyed him to Abuja University Teaching hospital in Gwagwalada.

He said the two assistants were rescued around 10:45 am and 11:47am respectively, from the rubble and also taken to hospital.

Ahman gave the names of the driver and assistants as Sulaiman Ohonsi, Musa Umar and Ibrahim Nuhu.

It was further learnt that a towing vehicle deployed by the Federal Road Safety Corps (FRSC) to pull out the truck was unable to do that, as rubble from the affected building kept dropping on the trapped victims.

The truck was eventually cleared off the road and the affected lane reopened to motorists in an operation that involved the security and rescue personal services, comprising NEMA, FEMA, FCT Fire Service, FRSC, NSCDC, and NPE.

Ona of Abaji hosts Kano Emir Ado Bayero

By Abubakar Sadiq Isah

The Ona of Abaji and chairman of the FCT Council of Chiefs, His Royal Majesty (HRM), Alhaji Adamu Baba Yunusa, has hosted the Emir of Kano, Dr. Aminu Ado Bayero, in his palace on Saturday.

Dr. Bayero, who arrived at the Ona's palace with his entourage at about 7pm, was ushered into the inner chamber of the palace where he met traditional rulers.

The Ona of Abaji, Alhaji Adamu Baba Yunusa, expressed joy over the visit of the Emir of Kano to his chieftdom.

He said the visit was indeed a historical and memorable one, adding that such a visit was a clear sign of the recognition the emir has for the chieftdom.

He said Abaji chieftdom and Kano emirate share affinity, adding that the current Governor of Kano, Dr Abdullahi Umar Ganduje, was once a sole administrator of the council.

The monarch, therefore, appealed to the emir for support for the completion of Abaji central mosque, which he said has remained uncompleted for over 20 years.

Responding, the Emir of Kano appreciated the Ona of Abaji and members of his traditional council as well as stakeholders of the area for the honour and recognition accorded to him.

He said Abaji chieftdom has always been his home, while assuring him that he would try his best to give support to some of the challenges facing the chieftdom including the completion of the central mosque in the area.

NESREA investigates water pollution scare in Abuja community

By Chidimma C. Okeke

The National Environmental Standards and Regulations Enforcement Agency (NESREA) has launched an investigation into the operations of a Chinese firm, Hongao Mining Company, over alleged pollution of the source of water in Kutasa community of Karshi District of the Federal Capital Territory (FCT).

The Director General of NESREA, Prof. Aliyu Jauro, who led an investigation team on an unscheduled inspection of the gold mining site of the company, recently, said the visit followed complaints by the residents alleging that the activities of the company compromised the quality of their main source of water.

Prof. Jauro and his team were received by the Site Manager, Mr Michael Moses, a translator, Mr. Stanley Ezeilo and three of the Chinese staff who were said to be on site but declined to interact with the NESREA D-G and his team.

"There are allegations of water pollution. We came here to carry out an investigation and ensure that they comply with the requisite provisions. We have a regulation, the National Environmental (Mining and Processing of Coal Ore and other Industrial Minerals) Regulation. What is required of all these mining companies is stipulated there," Prof. Jauro said.

He said there is need for them to have carried out an Environmental Impact Assessment, adding that his team would inspect the company's Environmental Statement, CAC documents and mining lease.

However, Mr. Michael said he had no idea of the availability of such documents and that the company had halted operations following the issues they were having with the community.

The NESREA boss, however, said the agency had taken water and soil samples for laboratory analysis. He said he would not hesitate to mete out prescribed penalties if the company is found to have flouted the law.

A resident of the community, Mr Chapi Godwin, said the company discharged waste water directly into their main source of water, a stream, which ran across the facility thereby making their water unfit for domestic use.

He said the company began operations in November 2019 and not long after, the Kutasa community began to experience outbreak of rashes on the skin of their children.

Minimum wage: FCT labour leaders to meet minister Tuesday

By Abubakar Sadiq Isah

Leaders of the Nigeria Labour Congress (NLC), Nigeria Union Teachers and Nigeria Union of Local Government Employees (NULGE) will tomorrow meet with the Minister of State for FCT, Hajiya Ramatu Tijjani Aliyu, to deliberate on the delay in payment of the new minimum wage to primary school teachers by the six area councils.

City News had reported that the executives of NUT had, last Tuesday, met with the six area council chairmen in Abuja, but that the meeting, presided over by the Area Councils Services Commission (ACSC) board chairman, Alhaji Isah Ramat, ended in a deadlock.

The chairman of FCT wing of NUT, Comrade Stephen Knabayi, who disclosed this to our reporter in a telephone interview, yesterday, said the meeting was at the instance of the minister and it would deliberate on the teachers' new minimum wage.

He added that the meeting would also have the six area council chairmen and some stakeholders in attendance.

He said the non-payment of the new minimum wage to primary school teachers by the council chairmen despite the union exhausting all avenues for negotiations was disappointing.

"Actually, we are mobilising all the labour leaders and executives to be part of the meeting with the Minister of State, Hajiya Ramatu Tijjani Aliyu, and the area council chairmen will also be in attendance to discuss further on the new minimum wage," he said.

Crowd Minsk as Belarus leader gets birthday call from Putin

Belarusians chanting "Happy Birthday, you rat" and flying red-and-white opposition flags gathered near President Alexander Lukashenko's residence yesterday as protesters kept up pressure on the veteran leader to resign, before dispersing peacefully.

The president, in office for 26 years, has shown no inclination to step down. For the second weekend in a row he appeared in a black cap and carrying an automatic rifle while walking around his residence, according to a photo published by Russia's RIA news agency. Lukashenko, who turned 66 on Sunday, is struggling to contain weeks of protests and strikes since winning an Aug. 9 election his opponents say was rigged. He denies electoral fraud and has said the protesters, whom he previously called "rats", are backed from abroad.

SOUTH AFRICAN

Nathaniel Julius: S/Africa police arrested for killing teen

Two South African police officers have been arrested over the deadly shooting of a 16-year-old boy, which had sparked violent street protests.

The family of Nathaniel Julius, who had Down's syndrome, said he had gone out to buy biscuits when he was shot dead in Johannesburg's Eldorado Park suburb. The officers will be charged with murder and "possibly defeating the ends of justice", said the police watchdog. The family said Julius was shot after not answering officers' questions. However, they added, this was because of his disability. The police initially said Julius had been caught up in a shootout between officers and local gangsters.

The Independent Police Investigative Directorate (Ipid) said it had decided to arrest the officers after "careful consideration of the evidence at hand".

MAURITIUS

Mauritius oil spill: Thousands march in Port Louis

Thousands of people have marched through the Mauritian capital, Port Louis, in protest at the authorities' handling of a massive oil spill, and the discovery of 39 dead dolphins.

Many wore black and waved the national flag, while honking horns and drumming.

Many called for the government to resign and had T-shirts with the inscription: "I love my country. I'm ashamed of my government."

It is the biggest protest the country has seen in recent years.

About 1,000 tonnes of oil spilled into a sanctuary for rare wildlife after the Japanese ship MV Wakashio struck a coral reef on 25 July.

INDIA

Woman arrested for naked video on India's bridge

A French woman has been arrested in India for making a video of herself naked on a sacred bridge in the northern city of Rishikesh. The video, shot on the Lakshman Jhula bridge, was posted on social media.

The woman faces charges under India's internet law, and could be sentenced to up to three years in prison if found guilty, AFP news agency reports. The suspension bridge over the Ganges river and is a holy site and popular spot for tourists.

The woman, who has since been released on bail, told police the video was made to promote her jewellery business.

"Maybe in France these things are not considered objectionable. But Rishikesh is a holy place and the Lakshman Jhula is the place where [Hindu gods] Ram, his brother Lakshman and wife Sita crossed the Ganges," RK Saklani, head of the police station where the woman was taken, told AFP.

LEBANON

Lebanese ambassador Adib poised to be designated PM

Lebanon's ambassador to Germany Mustapha Adib is poised to be designated prime minister on Monday after winning the support of major parties to form a new government facing a crippling financial crisis and the aftermath of the Beirut port explosion.

The nomination followed contacts by French President Emmanuel Macron over the last 48 hours to press Lebanese leaders to agree on a candidate, two senior Lebanese officials said, just ahead of a visit by the French leader to Lebanon this week.

Macron has taken centre stage in international efforts to get Lebanon's fractious leaders to start addressing a financial crisis that had devastated the economy even before the Aug. 4 port blast that killed some 190 people.

CANADA

Statue of first PM toppled by protesters demanding police defunding

A statue of Canada's first Prime Minister Sir John Macdonald was toppled in downtown Montreal by protesters marching in support of defunding police, government officials said.

The incident occurred at the end of a peaceful march on Saturday when a group of people climbed the monument and pulled down the statue, causing the head to fly off, according to video posted on social media.

Calls to defund the police have been growing across the United States and Canada, after a spate of violent incidents involving police. The death of George Floyd, a Black man, while in the custody of Minneapolis police in May sparked global protests about racial inequality and police brutality, and renewed pledges from some to fight racism.

APC stalwarts scheme for national chairmanship, other posts

By Saawua Terzungwe

Some stalwarts of the ruling All Progressives Congress (APC) have started scheming for the office of the party's national chairman and other top positions ahead of the party's national convention.

Our correspondent gathered from sources at the party's National Secretariat Abuja that a date for the convention is yet to be fixed.

One of the aspirants confirmed to Daily Trust yesterday that he would contest the chairmanship, but sought not to be mentioned saying, "I will make my ambition public soon."

Daily Trust also confirmed that former governors of Gombe and Cross River states as well as a former commissioner in Rivers State were consulting various stakeholders for the chairmanship contest.

Two top politicians from Bauchi and Kaduna states were also said to be scheming for the National Working Committee (NWC) top job.

The APC National Working Committee (NWC) was dissolved in June this year, by the National Executive Committee (NEC) which is the second-highest decision-making organ of the party.

Sequel to that, a 13-member National Caretaker/Extra-Ordinary National Convention Planning Committee led by Governor Mai Mala Buni of Yobe State was constituted for the day-to-day running of the party's affairs.

The interim panel was also mandated to, within six months, organise a national convention where a new crop of NWC officials would emerge.

'Why bad governance persists in Nigeria'

From Peter Moses, Abeokuta

Savannah Centre for Diplomacy, Democracy and Development (SCDDD) has blamed corruption, lack of transparency and poor oversight function on the part of the legislature for the persistence of bad governance in Nigeria.

The centre also said lack of good governance and effective leadership have hampered the country's progressive growth thereby leaving it to lag behind its peers.

The Executive Director of SCDDD, Ambassador Sani Bala, stated this in Abeokuta, Ogun State, during the Leadership Effectiveness and Accountability Dialogue (LEAD) organised by the organisation in collaboration with the MacArthur Foundation.

Bala said while there was lack of transparency on budgetary allocation and implementation on the part of the executive, the legislature both at the state and federal levels had failed to effectively scrutinise the projects in order to hold the executive accountable.

He said governments, its agencies and the citizens must continuously work in partnership for the promotion of transparent and accountable governance.

According to him, the LEAD project was part of the SCDDD's contributions to the nation's efforts towards establishing the culture of peaceful, transparent, accountable and open governance in Nigeria.

Through the two-year project, Bala said the centre had held interactive sessions with critical stakeholders across Kaduna, Kano, Imo, Rivers and Ogun States on how to promote peaceful and non-violent elections and beyond.

In his address, the SCDDD Board Chairman, Malam Abidu Yazid, explained that the centre was poised to continually call the attention of the political leaders to critical issues in Nigeria as well as finding solutions.

Yazid challenged the leaders at all levels to perform their tasks effectively in order to entrench the culture of good governance and effective leadership in Nigeria.

Kogi gov'ship: Supreme Court decides Gov Bello's fate today

By John Chuks Azu

The Supreme Court will today (Monday) deliver judgment in the appeal by the PDP candidate, Musa Wada, challenging the election of Governor Yahaya Bello of the APC over alleged irregularities.

The apex court will also deliver judgment in the appeal by the Social Democratic Party (SDP) candidate, Natasha Akpoti, challenging the outcome of the November 16, 2019 election.

A seven-member panel of justices presided by Chief Justice of Nigeria (CJN), Justice Tanko Muhammad, had on August 25 fixed the date for the judgements.

The apex court dismissed the appeal brought by candidate of the Democratic Peoples Party (DPP) in the state governorship election, Usman Imam Mohamed, whom it found to be underage, and awarded N400,000 cost against him.

Intrigue over APC candidate for Lagos East by-election

From Abdulateef Aliyu, Lagos

There is intrigue over who becomes the candidate of the APC for the October 31 by-election for Lagos East senatorial district, Daily Trust reports.

An uneasy calm has pervaded the ruling party over the purported adoption of Mr Tokunbo Abiru as a consensus candidate.

An assistant spokesman of the APC, Abiodun Salami, had granted an interview to the effect that the party had adopted Abiru, who resigned last week as the managing director of Polaris Bank, as the consensus candidate of the party.

Prior to his resignation, there were widespread reports about his adoption by

...as PDP screens 4 aspirants

the Governors' Advisory Council (GAC), the highest decision making organ in Lagos APC.

But on Saturday, the spokesman of the party, Hon. Seye Oladejo issued a statement insisting the party was yet to produce a candidate for the by-election including that of Kosofe 2 constituency which had been fixed for October 31.

Several candidates had been tipped to replace the late Senator Bayo Osinowo who died on June 15.

Among them are former Lagos Governor Akinwunmi Ambode, Senator Gbenga Ashafa who vacated the seat in 2019 after serving for eight years, among other party chieftains in Lagos East.

But Daily Trust

reports that as of the time of filing this report, only Abiru had purchased the N7 million forms for expression of interest and nomination.

This has further given credence to the reported adoption of Abiru as the party's candidate.

A party leader in Lagos East, who is also a member of the GAC, confirmed to Daily Trust yesterday that Abiru had been adopted as the consensus candidate which the constitution of the party allowed.

Elsewhere, in the opposition PDP, four candidates scaled through at the screening committee ahead of the conduct of the primary which has been fixed tentatively for September 5.

APC'll win Plateau South senatorial by-election - Lalong

From Dickson S. Adama & Ado Abubakar Musa, Jos

Governor Simon Lalong of Plateau State has expressed confidence that the All Progressives Congress (APC) will emerge victorious in the forthcoming Senate by-election for Plateau South.

He said this while addressing leaders of the party at an extraordinary zonal meeting held on Saturday in his Shendam Local Government Area of the state.

According to him, the party has continued to remain intact in the state and the leadership steadily delivering on its campaign promises and rescuing various sectors of the economy which, he said, all of which would give his party the needed advantage in the election.

The governor, therefore, urged party members to remain united and work together for a successful primary that would produce the party's candidate and eventually ensure victory at the main election.

Chairman of APC in the state Chief Letep Dabang, while speaking at the occasion, said five aspirants have indicated interest to participate in the primary election to produce the party's candidate for the senatorial by-election.

He commended the members for their exemplary conduct, promising that the party would be fair to all.

Dabang said the contestants under the APC seeking to fill the vacuum at the red chamber were Prof. Nora Dadu'ut, Prof. Emmanuel Garba, Prof. Doknaan Sheni, Hon. Nanven Nimfel and Bar. Demian Shekarau.

House committee fumes over Abuja-Kano road project

Richard P. Ngbokai, Kano

The House of Representatives' Committee on Works over the weekend inspected the ongoing construction work on the Abuja-Kano road, as well as Kano-Katsina roads and expressed dissatisfaction with the work pace.

Among the projects inspected included the 165 km Zuba-Kaduna road, 75 km Kaduna-Zaria road, and Zaria to Kano roads being handled by Julius Berger Construction Company.

Other projects inspected by the lawmakers were Kano western bypass and Kano-Katsina roads being handled by Dantata & Sawoe Construction Company and a Chinese consortium, China Civil Engineering Construction Company (CCECC) respectively.

Some of the lawmakers who spoke to journalist about their discoveries during the tour lamented the way the projects are being handled, describing it as disappointing.

At western bypass in Kano, the lawmakers had to suspend their oversight inspection indefinitely because the management of the company handling the project, Dantata & Sawoe was not properly represented to respond to questions arising from their discoveries.

The Committee Chairman, Engr. Abubakar Kabir Bichi was visibly angry as he called off the inspection over what he described as unfortunate conduct of the company's management which he alleged deliberately refused to avail itself to clear some grey issues about the project.

"As far as we are concerned, we wrote to them informing them that we are coming. We expect to see their management or someone that can take responsibility on their behalf. In view of this, we adjourn this exercise indefinitely," he said.

Daily Trust learnt that the Kano western bypass project involves the construction of 26.6km dual carriageway starting from Naibawa Km10 to Kano-Kaduna road; route 50 (A2) and ending at Dawanau village Km 15 on the Kano-Katsina road route 95 (A9) was initially awarded in 2007 as an extension of the Kano-Maiduguri dual carriageway.

The contract was awarded on 25th April 2007 at the sum of N13,226, 801, 593.27 and has an initial commencement date of 20th May 2007, and the initial contract period of 36 months which ended on the 20th of May 2010.

Though the contractors said the contract was at 98 percent level of completion, the lawmakers were however not happy over the laxity that characterised the handling of the project.

Kabiru Alhassan Rurum, representing Rano, Kibiya, and Bunkure federal constituency, disclosed that out of 173km Kaduna-Kano road, only 30km has been completed.

According to Rurum, "We started the tour from Zuba, that is the 00 levels to Kaduna; from Kaduna to Zaria, from Zaria to Kano, and as the chairman and the entire committee rightly stated we are not happy with the way and manner the work is being done.

Earlier when the team visited the Kano State Governor, Dr Abdullahi Umar Ganduje at the Government House, Engr. Kabir said "Despite collecting N70 billion out of the N155 billion total sum of the contract, Berger is still yet to do substantial work on the projects and the contract tenure is 36 months and the company spent 26 months on the project and they have only 9 months remaining.

"In phase one of the project, from Zuba to Kaduna, unfortunately, only 10 km has been executed out of the 165 km while from Kaduna to Zaria only five to six km completed out of the 75 km, then from Zaria to Kano, only 11km executed."

Housewife abducted 4 days after giving birth in Taraba

From Magaji Isa Hunkuyi, Jalingo

A housewife has been abducted by armed men suspected to be kidnappers at Namne village in Gassol Local Government Area of Taraba State on Saturday, four days after he gave birth.

Zainab Buba, a 25-year-old housewife, it was gathered, gave birth to a baby boy four days ago and was kidnapped from her room at midnight.

The kidnappers left the newborn baby behind even when the kidnapped mother insisted she wanted to carry her baby along.

Daily Trust further gathered that Zainab's husband, Buba Maianguwa is a traditional ruler.

It was learnt that the gunmen targeted Buba who was said to have some herds of cows, but he managed to escape through the back of the house when they arrived.

Residents of the village, it was gathered, have organised a search party in an attempt to rescue the nursing mother whose baby has been crying as it was put under the care of another nursing mother in the village.

The kidnappers, Daily Trust gathered, have called Buba Maianguwa, the husband of Zainab and demanded a ransom.

Police spokesman in the state DSP David Misal could not be reached for comment as his line was switched off when our reporter called him.

Blasphemy: Kano Ulama, NGOs back court verdict

From Ibrahim Musa Giginyu, Kano

The Ulama and non-government organisations (NGOs) in Kano under the auspices of Coalition of Ulama and NGOs in Kano State have expressed support for the death verdict on Kano singer for blasphemy against the Holy Prophet (SAW).

The support came in a statement issued by the coalition chairman, Professor Musa Muhammad Borodo, which said the prompt arrest and prosecution of the suspect saved the situation.

It added that the coalition is saddened by the unfortunate and insensitive commentaries and the reaction of some "so-called" human rights activists, Amnesty International, and some interest groups who faulted the ruling on the case without recourse to the extant law applicable to the offender and the environment the offence was committed.

The statement also commended the state governor, Dr Abdullahi Umar Ganduje, for expressing his willingness to respect the law and the sensibility of the people he leads.

Fulani leader counters Gani Adams, says no ISIS militant hiding in S/West

From Abdullateef Aliyu, Lagos

The Serikin Fulani of Oyo State, Alhaji Salihu Abdulkadir yesterday faulted the Aare Onakakanfo of Yorubaland and the leader of Oodua Peoples Congress (OPC), Otunba Gani Adams over his recent comments that terrorists are hiding in some communities and villages in the state.

The Fulani leader said the statement credited to Adams is unfortunate coming from a person of his calibre, saying there is no iota of truth in the claim.

Aare Gani Adams recently in an interview with BBC Yoruba claimed that some armed men working for the terrorist organisation, the Islamic State of Iraq and Syria (ISIS), are hiding in the thick forests of Ibarapa, Shaki, Oke Ogun and Igbo Ora communities in Oyo State with a plan to launch an attack in the region.

Speaking with Daily Trust yesterday, Abdulkadir, who is also the President of Jamu Nati Fulbe, the foremost Fulani organisation in the Yoruba speaking area of the South West, said there was no evidence to back up Gani Adams' claim, stressing that it was further from the truth.

He said a personality of Aare of Yoruba land caliber should not have made such allegation, which he described as not only spurious but another ploy to tag the Fulani herdsmen leaving peacefully in the South West.

The Fulani leader said, "I am the Serikin Fulani in Oyo State and I live at Ibarapa; I have never heard or seen any ISIS terrorist hiding in our communities.

"This kind of comments shouldn't have come from Aare. I am familiar with the terrain he is talking about; I know the whole of Igbo Ora and Ibarapa and I can tell you categorically that nothing of such exists. Also, there was no report from the security operatives as to the existence of any armed group whether of ISIS or whatever planning an attack."

SERAP sues Buhari over 'N800bn recovered loot'

From Adelanwa Bamgboye, Lagos

Socio-Economic Rights and Accountability Project (SERAP) has filed a lawsuit against President Muhammadu Buhari over failure to "disclose information and documents relating to the names of people from whom N800 billion in looted public funds have been recovered, specific dates of the recovery, and details of projects on which the money has been spent."

In the suit last Friday at the Federal High Court, Abuja, SERAP is seeking: "an order for leave to apply for judicial review and an order of mandamus to direct and/or compel President Buhari to publish a comprehensive list of names of people from whom N800 billion in looted funds have been recovered, the details of spending of the money, and the specific dates of the recovery."

SERAP is also seeking: "an order of mandamus to direct and compel President Buhari to instruct appropriate anti-corruption agencies to promptly, thoroughly and transparently investigate the alleged payment of N51 billion of public funds into individual private accounts in 2019."

Joined in the suit as respondents are Mr Abubakar Malami, SAN, Attorney General of the Federation and Minister of Justice, and Mrs Zainab Ahmed, Minister of Finance, Budget, and National Planning.

In the suit, SERAP is arguing that: "The court ought to compel the respondents to disclose the details and whereabouts of the public funds. There is no legally justifiable reason why the information should not be made widely available to Nigerians, especially as the Nigerian Constitution of 1999 (as amended) requires the government in section 15(5) to abolish all forms of corruption."

The suit followed SERAP's Freedom of Information (FoI) request dated 13 June, 2020 to President Buhari, stating that: "The public has a right to know-how recovered N800bn loot has been spent, and the details and purpose of the alleged payments of N51bn into individual private accounts..."

No date has been fixed for the hearing of the suit.

Jibia IDPs recount rape, robbery ordeal

From Tijjani Ibrahim, Katsina

Residents of some border communities in Jibia Local Government Area of Katsina State, whose villages were invaded by bandits lately, have recounted their ordeal.

On Thursday, 27 2020, the people of Tsambaye, Zango Mai Rumbuna and Karauki villages, men, women, and children decided to desert their houses, farmlands and the remnants of their belongings to take shelter in the Jibia Central Primary School in order to escape bandits harassment and torment in the area.

When Daily Trust visited the camp, some of the IDPs narrated how their villages were frequented by the bandits during which women, especially younger ones were raped, sometimes by a gang; while men were mercilessly beaten, and those who attempted resistance were murdered, with belongings carted away or vandalised.

One of the victims of rape told our reporter that a man was butchered with a cutlass, while two women were abducted, with one of the abducted a nursing mother taken along with her infant.

"Today is the third time when that man was killed in our village and before then, two women were abducted, one of them recently delivered a baby, but those merciless kidnappers took them away and did not even allow her to take a piece of clothing with which to wrap her baby. Only God knows the condition of the baby now as they are still there with", she said emotionally.

A young lady, Rabi, said eight men were killed when the bandits invaded their village, including the village head.

"Almost every middle-aged lady was raped in our village that night, either by one person or by a group of the bandits. They have beaten our men including even the younger ones and took our foodstuff away..." she narrated.

One of the leaders of the affected communities who didn't want his name mentioned, said his daughter was abducted, while he was robbed and beaten up by the bandits, with their domestic animals and poultry carted away.

They called on the governments at all levels to consider their plight, saying "We are in a dire situation, we cannot continue to remain here (in the school) and we cannot go back to our former place if the situation remains like that."

Former Adamawa governor laid to rest

By Amina Abdullahi, Yola

The body of defunct Gongola State Governor, Wilberforce Bafta Juta has been finally laid to rest in his residence in Pakka of Maiha Local Government Area of Adamawa State.

There was total adherence to the COVID-19 protocol as mourners were seen observing social distance and wearing a face mask at the cathedral LCCN church in Yola where the funeral service took place.

Governor of Adamawa State, Ahmadu Umaru Fintiri said the death of the former ambassador is a tremendous loss to the Peoples Democratic Party (PDP) in the state and the entire nation.

The state Deputy Governor, Chief Crowther Seth, who represented the governor at the burial, praised the late governor's commitment and his versatility of knowledge.

Deputy Governor of Taraba State, Haruna Manu said the late Juta had fostered unity and development in the two states and lauded his exemplary efforts in leadership.

Secretary to the Government of the Federation (SGF), Boss Mustapha, who represented the presidency, said the 76-year-old late Juta was his principal in secondary school, saying Adamawa people should accept his demise as an act of God.

Daura transport varsity: Construction begins September 2020 - Amaechi

From Tijjani Ibrahim, Katsina

Minister of Transport, Mr Rotimi Amaechi has disclosed that the construction work of the Chinese-assisted University of Transportation, Daura, will commence in September, this year.

Mr Amaechi disclosed this Saturday when he paid a courtesy call on Governor Aminu Bello Masari at government house, Katsina.

The minister expressed gratitude to the governor for the provision of land for the project, saying that the contractors were currently clearing and building the fence of the university.

The project, he said, was a donation by the Government of China through the Chinese Civil Engineering Construction Company (CCECC), adding that the government had made a request for the CCECC to include a primary and secondary school in the project.

He said a team from the federal ministry of transport had accepted to do the consultancy work on the project.

In his remarks, Governor Masari expressed appreciation to the federal ministry of transport for locating the university in Daura.

■ Victor Osimhen

'Osimhen not experiencing any kind of pressure at Napoli'

William D'Avila, the agent of Napoli forward Victor Osimhen, has stated that the Nigerian does not feel under pressure at the club.

The 21-year-old has been making headlines since his big-money move from Lille and showed a glimpse of his quality when he scored a hat-trick and provided an assist in an 11-0 routing of L'Aquila in the Partenopei's training camp at Castel di Sangro on Friday.

Such a performance only makes the excitement around Osimhen even stronger, something which the former Wolfsburg man is pleased about.

"We are extremely happy with Victor's performance. He called me and confessed that he was extremely happy for the first goals for the Azzurri," D'Avila told Radio Punto Nuovo.

"If he feels the pressure now? No, why should he? He's not experiencing any kind of pressure, he knows how to be a great striker. His goal is to score a lot of goals, so no pressure.

"His first impressions on Napoli and Gattuso? Perfect, everything. Victor already feels at home."

When quizzed on whether Napoli will be able to return to the Champions League next season, having settled for a Europa League spot by winning the Coppa Italia, D'Avila said: "Absolutely yes, it is the goal of Victor and all his teammates."

World Athletics unhappy with sports ministry's handling of AFN crisis

By Olusola 'Jide @jide_olusola

The international governing body for the sport of athletics, World Athletics (WA), has written to the Federal Ministry of Youths and Sports Development expressing its displeasure over the leadership crisis within the Athletics Federation of Nigeria (AFN).

In a letter dated 27th August 2020 and signed by the Chief Executive Officer, Jon Ridgeon, the World Athletics body said the crisis could have been resolved in accordance with the process laid out in the constitution.

It will be recalled that the Court of Appeal sitting in Abuja struck out the stay of execution application filed by the sports ministry over the recognition of Engineer Ibrahim Shehu Gusau as AFN president.

"Over the last few months our office has received communication addressed to our President from your Ministry concerning the status of Mr Shehu-Gusau as the President of AFN, the contents of which have been noted.

"Naturally, we are disappointed that the dispute has resulted in court proceedings when it could have been resolved in accordance with the process laid out in the constitution," the letter read.

■ Poster girl of Nigerian athletics, Blessing Okagbare at the 2013 World Athletics Championship in Moscow

The World Athletics acknowledged the AFN special congress held on 4th December 2019 where a new constitution was approved but expressed its "doubt about the status of that new constitution between the different factions within the AFN."

The body stated that it awaits the final verdict of the Court of Appeal while declaring that it has been corresponding with Engr Ibrahim Shehu-Gusau about the crisis as well as the allegations.

"According to our records, we understand that the mandate of the Board, including the President, is until June 2021.

"It seems to us that whatever the outcome of the court proceedings in order to ensure there is no ambiguity and all stakeholders are absolutely clear it will become necessary to engage with the membership of the AFN on the status of the constitution and the President, whoever that may be in the future, to ensure they have their constitutional endorsement.

"As I am sure you will agree, ultimately these are matters for the membership to manage, consider and decide in the long-term," said the international body.

Ex-Falcons star, Avre welcomes first child at 44

Former Nigeria international Patience Avre has announced the birth of her first child.

The former Super Falcons striker has become a mother at age 44 following her announcement of the birth of her first baby on Friday.

Following her safe delivery, Avre has since joined her husband at their home in Chicago, Illinois, in the USA celebrating the birth of a new baby boy, Oritse Laju.

Days after returning home, she took to social media to share a video message of her dancing with her husband with the baby on Sunday.

"Our bundle of joy is here. We are grateful for the gift of him," Avre posted on her Instagram page.

"God made all things beautiful in his time. In his time, the perfect time he gave Oritse Laju to us. Our beloved son, Laju in whom we are well pleased. You're welcome to our world of wonders. You are a priceless awesome gift to us and your generation.

"Oh, how I love your cute loving face. How I love your chuckling, your sweet smiles light up stars in my bowels. I bless you today and always. You will live to fulfil your purpose. You grow tall, strong, and healthy."

Ogun All Stars bemoan deplorable state of Muda Lawal stadium

From Peter Moses, Abeokuta

Ex-football players in Ogun State yesterday bemoaned the deplorable condition of Late Super Eagles midfield maestro, Mudashiru Babatunde Lawal's Stadium in Asero, Abeokuta where a number of football stars have played in the past.

The ex-footballers under the umbrella of All Stars Football Club, Asero branch equally expressed displeasure over the state of sport activities in the State, which they described as "dead."

The President, All stars football club, Asero branch, Salmon Akinbo expressed this view when the executive members of Sports Writers Association of Nigeria (SWAN), Ogun state chapter paid a visit to the association of former players.

Akinbo who described the stadium as 'iconic pitch' which has produced football stars expressed regret that the state government has abandoned the stadium to be taken over by weeds and reptiles.

"Muda Lawal stadium is an iconic pitch that has produced many football icons. Government in the state has continued to pay lip service to renovation of the stadium.

"The poor state of the stadium is worrisome, even the cleaning of the pitch has been put in our custody. Attention has been given to MKO Abiola stadium at Kuto, but this is where football kicked off in Ogun state.

"We attempted to seek private support to uplift the stadium, but we are handicapped because we have limited resources.

"We are also afraid because we have been informed that the state government wants to sell or concession the stadium to a private company. The emphasis here is to resuscitate this stadium not to sell," he said.

Responding, the SWAN Chairman, Alhaji Hakeem Akintunde commended the veteran footballers for keeping the legacy of late Mudashiru Lawal alive.

Akintunde assured the ex-soccer stars of SWAN's support at all times.

Short fuse of FFK

How can anybody in Femi Fani-Kayode's position not have a short fuse in today's Nigeria? The people who are criticizing him for admitting that he has a short fuse and is liable to explode at what they think is a journalist's harmless question, know not what they are talking about.

To the critics, it looked reasonable that Daily Trust's Calabar correspondent Eyo Charles asked FFK who is bankrolling his trips around PDP-controlled states to inspect projects. What is harmless about that question? You mean in this Nigeria, a man should disclose that a state governor shoved a bag full of naira notes and an envelop full of scarce foreign exchange into his pockets in order for him to come to his state, "inspect" carefully selected and well dressed-up projects and then try to convince the world that the governor is doing a wonderful job?

Look, do you even know how projects are chosen in Nigeria before a VIP's visit to inspect or to commission them? Senator Aliyu Magatakarda Wamakko once told me a story, that when he was the military-appointed Sole Administrator of Sokoto Local Government in the 1980s, Government House lined up a project to be commissioned by a visiting VIP. Trouble was, the project was uncompleted but it was already listed in the protocol schedule for the VIP visitor to commission. So, the Sole Administrator rounded up the contractor and told him he must work overnight. The contractor complained that his men could not paint the building in the dark, so Wamakko turned around his official Peugeot 504 car and beamed the headlight throughout the night while the men worked.

If not because of "mobilization," an honest project inspector should not accept a list of projects carefully orchestrated by the state government. He should do what a Senate committee did four years ago, according to a story that then Senator Baba Kaka Bashir Garbai once told me. His team was in the Niger Delta to inspect NDDC projects and they asked for a list of completed and paid for projects. The commission turned over a list of 3,000 projects scattered across seven states. All these are completed and paid for? Yes, NDDC officials said, and we have lined up the ones you will inspect. No, the committee members said. Since all of them are completed, we are going to select at random those to be inspected. Sure enough, when they selected three dozen projects at random, 90% of them were non-existent. Did FFK select the projects he was to inspect or did he just accept a list drawn up by Cross River State Government officials?

Besides, just because you come to "inspect" a project and it looks impressive to you, did you find out how much it cost, whether the work done justified the cost, if and how much money was siphoned from the contract, or even whether the project was a priority identified by the community or whether it was just erected at the behest of bureaucrats and politicians for other reasons? A community may get an impressive ICT centre when, left to them, they prefer to have pipe-borne water or a refurbished health center. I attended a workshop organized by UNDP in Bauchi in the 1990s, where experts attributed the large number of abandoned projects in this country to lack of community input in the choice of projects.

Newly arrived governors and LGA chairmen in Nigeria do not want to complete projects started by their predecessors, no matter how laudable, because they will not get political credit for it. Nigerian voters only give you credit for a project that you started, even if someone else completed it. According to UNDP, the solution to that is for communities to identify their own priorities so that even when a new ruler comes, they would say, "This is our priority project. Please complete it. Don't worry, we will give you political credit for completing it."

You don't expect an inspector like FFK to ask questions about whether the project is a community priority or whether it was instituted by a politician because of its contract-intensive nature. If he asks questions like that, who will invite him next time to inspect projects in his own state? Such invitations don't come cheap. Governors are not fools. They don't invite every Tom, Dick and Harry and make costly arrangements for him to come and inspect their projects, unless they will gain something politically from it.

What is the likely gain from having a man like FFK inspect your projects? One obvious one is that he get mouth, to use Nigerian parlance. He speaks volubly with a faint posh English accent, all the while glaring at his listeners and regaling his audience with a claim to glorious family history and rich Cambridge education. Well, not so fast. If FFK's resume were that glorious, why is he not invited to inspect projects in the Southwest? I have not seen any Southwest state governor invite him to help inspect his projects. There must be more to it than APC control of most Southwestern states whereas FFK is a PDP member, for now. Is it because his family's political history isn't so well perceived at home?

With respect to PDP state governments' invitation to FFK to inspect their projects, we do not know for sure who initiated it. It is unlikely that PDP governors sat at a forum and identified FFK, of all available prominent persons sympathetic to the party, to be the one to go round and inspect their projects. Much more likely that they received a proposal. It was an offer they could not refuse because FFK has shown himself capable of going overnight from sweet mouth to a very foul mouth, and vice versa.

One only has to refer to his very acerbic attacks on President Obasanjo's administration in its early days. Overnight, he accepted a job as Obasanjo's top attack dog. When a reporter asked him that time why he serially launched acerbic attacks at anyone who criticized Obasanjo, including General Yakubu Gowon and Col. Dangiwa Umar, FFK said, "My brief is that whoever joins issues with the President, I should join issues with him." I see; whoever joins issues with the president, even if what the person said had a ring of truth to it. Is it the same principle that he is extending to this project inspection tour, that whoever joins issues with any of his hosts, he should acerbically join issues with him?

That includes the reporter who asked to who is bank rolling the tour. In between fits of rage, FFK actually tried to answer the question by saying as a lawyer and a former minister, it should be apparent that he could finance his tours. Not necessarily. Money does not come flowing to anyone just because he is a lawyer; he has to work hard to earn it. There is scant evidence that FFK earned money from the law. In answer to a question he was asked in Gusau last month, he said he has been in politics since 1990. Now, since he was called to the bar only a few years before that, that timeline did not give enough time to earn money from the law.

As for being a former minister, that is probably a revelation. Even a serving minister would not be able to pay his way through a nation-wide tour from his legitimate earnings, not to mention a former one. How many former ministers and former governors do we have in Nigeria that are having trouble fueling their cars? One can only escape that fate if he made hay while the sun shined, to put it delicately. Maybe that is why some former ministers are standing trial for alleged embezzling of public funds. We now begin to see why Eyo Charles was stupid to be asking questions about bankrolling.

Serena sets sights-again-on 24th Grand Slam title

■ Serena Williams

Serena Williams' protracted pursuit of Margaret Court's record of 24 Grand Slam titles resumes at a 2020 US Open that promises to be unlike any other.

The absence of fans because of coronavirus concerns means the buzz and hubbub that define the US Open will be missing.

Williams, whose 23 major victories are an Open-era record, will have nothing but her own skill and will to get her through the tough moments as she seeks a record-breaking seventh title on the hard courts at Flushing Meadows.

"I don't dislike it and that's weird because I am a player that is so emotional and so, like, a crowd player," Williams said.

Lewandowski wins German Player of the Year award

■ Robert Lewandowski

Bayern Munich striker Robert Lewandowski was voted Germany's Footballer of the Year on Sunday.

The 31-year-old Pole was the runaway winner of the title awarded by the football magazine Kicker, following a vote by journalists.

Lewandowski received 276 votes, well ahead of two other members of Bayern's triple-winning squad: Thomas Muller (54 votes) and Joshua Kimmich (49).

The striker amassed 55 goals for Bayern, finishing top scorer in every club competition in which he played. He hit 34 in the Bundesliga, 15 in the Champions League and six in the German Cup, as Bayern won all three.
